A London publisher has issued a Hay or McKinley, so their names were not recorded in the sacred volume. Can it be possible after all the toadying that Hay and McKinley have done that there is not even a trace of the blood of a king in their veins? After all that is not surprising. The Independent congratulates the epublican board of educational lands and funds upon their recent purchase of $80,000 of Burt county refunding bonds, and especially does it congratulate Treasurer Stuefer, because the purchase will enable him to stave off for a while yet what is sure to come—a cool half million dollars of idle school money. Last Saturday, if 'staff correspondents" are to be believed, he had a smaller balance of uninvested permanent school funds than had Treasurer Meserve a year previous; and for this the people will give him due credit. But Treasurer Stuefer has today a great mass of. general fund warrants held by the permanent school fund, and almost due: when they are called and paid it will throw a large amount of money on his hands for reinvestment. He cannot pick up $80,000 in county bonds every day or every month and, hence, must look to general fund warrants for the bulk of his investment. And by his own act, in appealing to the senate last winter to kill Representative Murray's bill (which sought to reduce interest on state warrants from 4 to 3 per cent), he deprived himself of the opportunity to secure a larger percentage of all general fund warrants issued-and caused the taxpayers to pay approximately $20,000 a year of needless interest. ********

The above letter coming from a source that has always proved reliable is all that The Independent can get concerning the matter. It is an astonishing fact that every officer of the state department who has been sent to South Africa and who has made an investigation of the facts on the ground is a firm adherent of the Boer cause—one of them even forsaking his party and giving up his high position because of his earnest conviction of the justness of the Boers in fighting for their liberty. Whether the aid given to the British by our secretary of state was the cause of the death of Adelbert Hay may never be known, but that the young man, in spite of the position of his father, became a great admirer of the men who are fighting for liberty in South Africa is a fact that will be recorded by the historian.

PROTECT THE THIEVES

That Seems to be the Order That McKinley Issued Before He Started for Canton

McKinley has gone to Canton to spend his vacation, and it is generally believed that he made arrangements of Lord Roberts that it was a milito protect the thieves who have been tary necessity because the foreigners robbing people of millions in New were in sympathy with the Boers and York before he started. None of the Wall street pirates are to be prosecuted. In regard to this the New York are the laws against over-certifying accounts and making excessive loans. The morality of these laws, based directly as they are upon the command 'Thou shalt not steal,' is obvious on their face. The wisdom of these laws is demonstrated almost to remain there through a few sickly every time a national bank fails. "There is then only one excuse for not moving in the case of the Seventh | New York World remarks: National precisely as the authorities would move in a case of alleged theft of a loaf of bread or alleged pocketpicking. That excuse is that the alleged crimes were committed by such respectable persons, so well dressed, so well housed, so well educated, so excellent in social standing!"

The failure of the Perry Heath Seventh National bank has brought to light some more stealing done by that republican favorite Neeley, who has been enjoying himself in Havana, of the despicable and the abhorent nominally as a prisoner, for many months. Old Spanish and Cuban coins, found in the vaults of the Havana postoffice when Neeley took charge of it, later were shipped to America, and the United States assay office gave him a check for $964,230.03 in payment for them. This check was deposited in the Seventh National bank of New York. The coins were shipped to America in mail pouches as part of the railway mail service.

Here is nearly a million more of stealing that has been unearthed by the appointment of a receiver and the examination of the books of the Seventh National bank. Remember that all this looting has been done by men very close to the administration-so close that McKinley will see to it that no prosecutions will be instituted in the courts for fear that more abominable things will be brought to light. It now seems that Neeley's stealings while he was playing carpet-bag official in Cuba for a few months will amount to very much more than a million dollars. Neeley has never been tried. Will he ever have a trial? It don't matter. On with the dance. Neeley will pay the fiddler. He can afford to do so.

All London is Excited Over Them-Did a Large Number of English Officers Side With the Boers and Were Shot

by Their Commanders

According to the London papers there is great excitement in that city over the stories that a large number reported dead from enteric fever were in fact court-martialed and shot or sent into penal servitude for giving ald and comfort to the Boers whom they were sent to fight. They say that some of them are actually confined in prisons in England. This comes on the heels of the other stories that a large number of foreigners are making claims upon the British government for losses sustained by being expelled from the country by military orders, together with the statement were assisting them.

Other telegrams are to the effect that a new agitation has broken out in England in favor of stopping the war and it gains ground all the time "Just as much a part of our penal as the cost of the war continues to instatutes as the laws against stealing crease. ### Three Great Evils

Editor Independent: These three great evils go together in almost all the towns and cities of the United States. The first is whisky ; the second gambling, and the third is prostitution, and where one exists, one or both of the other two is always found. The three go together at all times in all places. Whisky breeds gambling and gambling breds prostitution.

If a man lives in a city and has a cur that he thinks anything of and that cur is on the streets at night, he will see to it that that cur is brought in and put in the kennel before he goes to bed. But there are some parents who know that their girls are out on the streets with young men who drink whisky or fore the girls are beyond control. I know what I am talking about. Parents look after your girls and know where they are and who they are with on the streets at night.
