A comprehensive synopsis of President cosevelt's message to Congress is given be-

To the Senate and House of Representatives: "The Congress assembles this year under the shadow of a great calamity. On the sixth of September, President McKinley was shot of an anarchist while attending the Panamerican Exposition at Buffalo, and died in the contraction of that month that city on the fourteenth of that month 'Of the last seven elected Presidents, he is the third who has been murdered, and the bare recital of this fact is sufficient to justity grave alarm among all loyal American zens. Moreover, the circumstances of this, he third assassination of an American Presiant, have a peculiarly sinister significance. oth President Lincoln and President Gar-eld were killed by assassins of types unfortunately not uncommon in history, President Lincoln falling a victim to the terrible pas-sions aroused by four years of civil war, and President Garfield to the revengeful vanity of a disappointed office-seeker. President McKiniey was killed by an utterly deprayed criminal belonging to that body of criminals who object to all governments, good and had alike, who are against any form of popular liberty if it is guaranteed by even the most just and liberal laws, and who are as hostile to the upright exponent of a free people's ble despot.

'It is not too much to say that at the time of President McKinley's death he was the most widely loved man in all the United States; while we have never had any public man of his position who has been so wholly free from the bitter animosities incident to public life. There could be no personal ustred of him, for he never acted with aught put consideration for the welfare of others. No one could fail to respect him who knew one could fail to respect him who knew in public or private life. The defenders murdererous criminals who seek to excuse their criminality by asserting that it is exercised for political ends, inveigh against seassination even this base apology can-ot be urged."

The President speaks in the highest terms the personal and public virtues of Mr. Mcy. Describing the nature of the assas sination and the motive that inspired it, the nousage continues:

Motive of the Assassin.

"The blow was aimed not at this President, but at all Presidents at every symbol of government. The anarchist, and especially marchist in the United States, is merely one type of criminal, more dangerous than any other because he represents the same pravity in a greater degree. The man who savocates anarchy directly or indirectly, in any shape or fashion, or the man who apolocizes for anarchists and their deeds, makes himself merally accessory to murder before the fact. The anarchist is a criminal whose perverted instincts lead him to prefer confuon and chaos to the most beneficent form of social order. His protest of concern for workingmen is outragebus in its impudent falsity; for if the political institutions of this cuntry do not afford opportunity to every nest and intelligent son of toil, then the hope is forever closed against him. The anarchist is everywhere not merely the my of system and progress, but the deadly foe of liberty. If ever anarchy is triumphant its triumph will last for but one red mement, to be succeeded for ages by the my night of despotism.

Would Exclude Anarchists.

"I earnestly recommend to the Congress that in the exercise of its wise discretion it should take into consideration the coming to this country of anarchists or persons profosting principles hostile to all government and justifying the murder of those placed in authority. No matter calls more urgently for the wisest thought of the Congress.

"The Federal courts should be given jurisover any man who kills or attempts to kill the President or any man who by the nstitution or by-law is in line of succesaton for the Presidency, while the punishment for an unsuccessful attempt should be proportioned to the endrmity of the offense against our institutions.

"Anarchy is a crime against the whole human race; and all mankind should band against the anarchist. His crime should be made an offense against the law of nations, like piracy and that form of manstealing thousan as the slave trade for it is of far acker infamy than either. It should be so eclared by treaties among all civilized pow-

The Trust Problem.

"The tremendous and highly complex industrial development which went on with over accelerated rapidity during the latter of the nineteenth century brings us face to face, at the beginning of the twentieth. with very serious social problems. The old laws, and the old customs which had almost binding force of law, were once quite stribution of wealth. Since the industrial which have so enormously increased oductive power of mankind, they are no

It is not true that as the rich have grown richer the poor have grown poorer. On the contrary, never before has the average man wige-worker, the farmer, the small tradat the present time. There have been abuses connected with the accumulation of wealth; rai it remains true that a fortune accumu-lated only on condition of conferring immense incidental benefits upon others. Succomsful enterprise, of the type which benefits all mankind, can only exist if the conditions re such as to offer great prizes as the rewards of success.

Moreover, we should recognize the immense importance to this material development of leaving as unhampered as is compatible with the public good the strong forceful men upon whom the success business operations inevitably rests.

"An additional reason for caution in dealing with corporations is to be found in the international commercial conditions of to-day. The same business conditions which have produced the great aggregations of cor-porate and individual wealth have mad them very potent factors in international commercial competition. America has only just begun to assume that commanding position in the international business world which we ileve will more and more be hers. It is of the utmost importance that this position be not jeoparded, especially at a time when the everflowing abundance of our own naturesources and the skill, business energy, and mechanical aptitude of our people make foreign markets essential. Under such con-ditions it would be most unwise to cramp or to fetter the youthful strength of our

It spreads throughout, and while it is bad for everybody, it is worst for those furthest down. The capitalist may be shorn of his luxuries; but the wage-worker may be deprived of even bare necessities.

The first requisite to our prosperity is the continuity and stability of this economic policy. Nothing could be more unwise than to disturb the business interests of the country by any general tariff change at this time. Government Supervision. "It is no limitation upon property rights or freedom of contract to require that when men receive from government the privilege of doing business under corporate form, which frees them from individual responsibility. and enables them to call into their enterprises the capital of the public, they shall do so upon absolutely truthful representations as to the value of the property in which the capi-tal is to be invested. Corporations engaged in interstate commerce should be regulated if they are found to exercise a license working to the public injury. It should be as much the aim of those who seek for social betterment to rid the business world of crimes of cunning as to rid the entire body relities of currents. politic of crimes of violence. Great corpora-tions exist only because they are created and safeguarded by our institutions and it is therefore our right and our duty to see that they work in harmony with these insti-

Publicity Remedy for Trusts. "The first essential in determining how to deal with the great industrial combinations is knowledge of the facts—publicity. In the interest of the public, the government should have the right to inspect and examine the workings of the great corporations engaged in interstate business. Publicity is the only sure remedy which we can now invoke. What further remedies are needed in the way of governmental regulation, or taxation, can only be determined after publicity has been obtained, by process of law, and in the course of administration. The first requisite is knowledge, full and complete—knowledge hich may be made public to the world.
"Artificial bodies, such as corporations and joint stock or other associations, depending upon any statutory law for their existence or privileges, should be subject to proper gov rnmental supervision, and full and accurat information as to their operations should be made public regularly at reasonable intervals. "The large corporations, commonly called trusts, though organized in one state, always do business in many states, often doing very little business in the state where they are ncorporated. There is utter lack of uniformity in the state laws about them; and as no over their acts, it has in practice proved impossible to get adequate regulation through state action. Therefore, in the interest of the whole people, the Nation should, without interfering with the power of the states in the matter itself, also assume power of super-vision and regulation over all corporations doing an interstate business. This is espe cially true where the corporation derives a portion of its wealth from the existence of me monopolistic element or tendency in its business. There would be no hardship in such supervision banks are subject to it, and in their case it is now accepted as a simple matter of course. Indeed, it is probable that supervision of corporations by the National government need not go so far as is now the case with the supervision exercised over them by so conservative a state as Massachusetts in order to produce excellent results.

"I believe that a law can be framed which will enable the National government to exercise control along the lines above indicated; profiting by the experience gained through the passage and administration of the Inter state-Commerce Act. If, however, the judg ment of the Congress is that it lacks the then a constitutional amendment should be submitted to confer the power.

"There should be created a Cabinet officer to be known as Secretary of Commerce and Industries, as provided in the bill introduced at the last session of the Congress. It should he his province to deal with commerce in its proadest sense including among many other things whatever concerns labor and all mat-ters affecting the great business corporations and our merchant marine.

Restriction on Immigration.

"With the sole exception of the farming interest, no one matter is of such vital moment to our whole people as the welfare of the wage-workers. If the farmer and the wage-worker are well off, it is absolutely certain that all others will be well off, too. It is therefore a matter for hearty congratulation .that on the whole wages are higher to-day in the United States than ever before in our history, and far higher than in any other country. The standard of living is also higher than ever before. Every effort of legislator and administrator should be bent to secure the permanency of this condition of things and its improvement wherever possiby the tariff, but it should also be protected so far as it is possible from the presence in this country of any laborers brought over by contract, or of those who, coming freely, yet represent a standard of living so desed that they can undersell our men in the labor market and drag them to a lower level. I regard it as necessary, with this end in view, to re-enact immediately the law excluding Chinese laborers and to strengthen it wherever necessary in order to make

"So far as practicable under the conditions of government work, provision should be made to render the enforcement of the eighthour law easy and certain. In all indus-tries carried on directly or indirectly for the United States government women and chil-dren should be protected from excessive hours of labor, from night work, and from work under unsanitary conditions. "The most vital problem with which this country, and for that matter the whole civworld, has to deal, is the problem which has for one side the betterment of social conditions, moral and physical, in large cities, and for another side the effort to deal with the tangle of far-reaching questions which we group together when we speak of "labor." Very great good has been and will be accomplished by associations or unions of wage-workers, when managed with forethought, and when they combine insistence upon their own rights with law-abiding respect for the rights of others. The display of these qualities in such bodies is a duty to the Nation no less than to the associations themselves. Finally, there must also in many eases be action by the government in order to safeguard the rights and interests of all. Under our Constitution there is much more scope for such action by the state and the municipality than by the Nation. But on coints such as those touched on above the National government can act. "Our present immigration laws are unsat isfactory. We need every honest and efficient immigrant fitted to become an Ameri can citizen, every immigrant who comes here to stay, who brings here a strong body, a stout heart, a good head, and a resolute pur-pose to do his duty well in every way and to bring up his children as law-abiding and God-fearing members of the community. But there should be a comprehensive law enactarchistic societies, but also all persons who are of a low moral tendency or of unsavory eputation. This means that we should require a more thorough system of inspection abroad and a more rigid system of examinaon at our immigration ports, the former being especially necessary "The second object of a proper immigra-tion law ought to be to secure by a careful and not merely perfunctory educational test some intelligent capacity to appreciate Amer ican institutions and act sanely as American citizens. This would not keep out all anarchists, for many of them belong to the intelligent criminal class. But it would do what is also in point, that is, tend to decrease the sum of ignorance, so potent in producing the envy, suspicion, malignant passion, and hatred of order, out of which anarchistic sentiment inevitably springs. Finally, all persons should be excluded who are below a certain standard of economic fitness to enter our industrial field as com-petitors with American labor. There should e proper proof of personal capacity to earn an American living and enough money to in sure a decent start under American conditions. This would stop the influx of cheap labor, and the resulting competition which gives rise to so much of bitterness in American industrial life; and it would dry up the springs of the pestilential social conditions in our great cities, where anarchistic organizations have their greatest possibility of ed with the object of working a threefold improvement over our present system. First,

we should aim to exclude absolutely not only all persons who are known to be believers in anarchistic principles or members of an-

Question of Reciprocity.

"There is general acquiesence in our pres-economic policy. It was specially provided for in the present tariff law. "Our first duty is to see that the protection granted by the tariff in every case where it is needed is maintained, and that reciprocity be sought for so far as it can safely b without injury to our home industries. Just low far this is must be determined accord ing to the individual case, remembering al-ways that every application of our tariff policy to meet our shifting national needs must be conditioned upon the cardinal fact that the uties must never be reduced below the point that will cover the difference between the labor cost here and abroad. The well-being of the wage-worker is a prime consideration of our entire policy of economic legislation. "Subject to this proviso of the proper proat home, the principle of reciprocity must command our hearty support. The phenomenal growth of our export trade emphasizes the urgency of the need for wider markets and for a liberal policy in dealing with foreign nations. Whatever is merely petty and vexatious in the way of trade restrictions should be avoided. The customers to whom we dispose of our surplus products in the long run, directly or indirectly, purchase those surplus products by giving us something in return. Their ability to purchase our products should as far as possible be secured by so arranging our tariff as to enable us to take from them those products which we can use without harm to our own industries and labor, or the use of which will be of marked benefit to us. "We have now reached the point in the development of our interests where we are not only able to supply our own markets but to produce a constantly growing surplus for which we must find markets abroad. To secure these markets we can utilize existing duties in any case where they are no longer needed for the purpose of protetion, or in any case where the article is not produced here and the duty is no longer necessary for revenue; as giving us something to offer in exchange for what we ask. The cordial relations with other nations which are so de-reciprocity treaties laid before it by my pre-Our Merchant Marine.

sirable will naturally be promoted by the course thus required by our own interests.

"The natural line of development for a policy of reciprocity will be in connection with those of our productions which no longer require all of the support once needed to establish them upon a sound basis, and with those others where either because of natural or of economic causes we are beyond the reach of successful competition.

"The condition of the American merchant remedial action by the Congress. It is disreditable to us as a Nation that our merchant marine should be utterly insignificant in comparison to that of other nations which we overtop in other forms of business. 'American shipping is under certain great disadvantages when put in competition with the shipping of foreign countries. Many of the fast foreign steamships, at a speed of fourteen knots or above, are subsidized; and all our ships, sailing vessels and steamers alike, cargo carriers of slow speed and mail carriers of high speed, have to meet the fact that the original cost of building American ships is greater than is the case abroad that the wages paid American officers and seamen are very much higher than those paid the officers and seamen of foreign competing countries; and that the standard of living living on the ships of our commercial rivals "Our government should take such action as will remedy these inequalities. The American merchant marine should be restored to 'The Act of March 14, 1900 intended un equivocally to establish gold as the standard oney and to maintain at a parity therewith all forms of money medium in use with us has been shown to be timely and judicious. price of our government bonds in the world's market, when compared with the price of similar obligations issued by other nations, is a flattering tribute to our public credit. This condition it is eminently desir able to maintain.

'In many respects the National Banking Law furnishes sufficient liberty for the proper exercise of the banking function but there seems to be need of better safeguards against the deranging influence of commercial crises and financial panics. Moreover, the currency of the country should be made responsive to the demands of our domestic trade and commerce.

Reduction of Revenues

"The collections from duties on imports and nternal taxes continue to exceed the ordiary expenditures. The utmost care should be taken not to reduce the revenues so that thre will be any possibility of a deficit; but, after providing against any such contingency, means should be adopted which will bring the revenues more nearly within the limit of our actual needs.

"I call special attention to the need of strict economy in expenditures. The fact that our national needs forbid us to be niggardly providing whatever is actually necessary to our well-being, should make us doubly careful to husband our national resources, as each of us husbands his private resources, by scrupulous avoidance of anything like wasteful or reckless expenditure.

Regulation of Railroads.

In 1887 a measure was enacted for the regulation of interstate railways, commonly known as the Interstate Commerce Act. The cardinal provisions of that act were that railway rates should be just and reasonable and that all shippers, localities, and commodities should be accorded equal treatment. commission was created and endowed with what were supposed to be the necessary powers to execute the provisions of this act. "That law was largely an experiment. Ex-perience has shown the wisdom of its purposes, but has also shown, possibly that some of its requirements are wrong, certainly that the means devised for the enforcement of its provisions are defective.

"The act should be amended. The railway s a public servant. Its rates should be just to and open to all shippers alike. The government should see to it that within its juris diction this is so and should provide a speedy nexpensive, and effective remedy to that end At the same time it must not be forgotten that our railways are the arteries through which the commercial lifeblood of this nation flows. Nothing could be more foolish than the enactment of legislation which would unneces-sarily interfere with the development and operation of these commercial agencies. The subject is one of great importance and calls for the earnest attention of the Congress. The message points out the value of the American forests and the necessity for their conservation, and urges the construction and maintenance of reservoirs and irrigating systems for the reclamation of the arid lands of the West. Of the water rights it says: "In the arid states the only right to water which should be recognized is that of use. irrigation this right should attach to the land reclaimed and be inseparable therefrom. Granting perpetual water rights to others than users, without compensation to the public, is open to all the objections which apply to giving away perpetual franchises to the public utilities of cities. A few of the Western states have already recognized this and have incorporated in their constitutions the doctrine of perpetual state ownership of water.

Development of Hawail. "Our aim should be not simply to reclaim the largest area of land and provide homes for the largest number of people, but to create for this new industry the best possible ocial and industrial conditions; and this requires that we not only understand the existing situation, but avail ourselves of the best experience of the time in the solution of its problems. A careful study should be made, both by the nation and the states, of the irigation laws and conditions here and abroad. Ultimately it will probably be necessary for the nation to co-operate with the several arid states in proportion as thes states by their legislation and administration show themselves fit to receive it. "In Hawaii our aim must be to develop the erritory on the traditional American lines. We do not wish a region of large cities tilled by cheap labor; we wish a healthy American community of men who themselves till the islands should be shaped with this end in view; the well-being of the average home-maker must afford the true test of the healthy development of the islands. The land policy should as nearly as possible be modeled on our homestead system.

"It is a pleasure to say that it is hardly more necessary to report as to Porto Rico than as to any state or territory within our continental limits. The island is thriving as never before, and it is being administered efficiently and honestly. Its people are now enjoying liberty and order under the protection of the United States, and upon this fact we congratulate them and euraelyes. Their material welfare must be as carefully and jealously considered as the welfare of farms they own. All our legislation for the present session of the Congress closes this will be an accomplished fact. Cuba will then start as her own mistress; and to the beautiful Queen of the Autilies, as she unfolds this new page of her destiny, we extend our heartiest greetings and good wishes. Elsewhere I have discussed the question of reciprocity. In the case of Cuba, however, there are weighty reasons of morality and of national interest why the policy should be held to have a peculiar application, and I most earnestly ask your attention to the wisdom, indeed to the vital need, of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States. Cuba has in her constitution affirmed what we desired, that she should stand, in international matters, in closer and more friendly relations with us than with any other power; and we are bound by every consideration of honor and expediency to pass commercial measures in the interest of her material well-being.

The Philippine Problem. "In the Philippines our problem is larger. They are very rich tropical islands, inhabited by many varying tribes, representing widely different stages of progress toward civilization. Our earnest effort is to help these people upward along the stony and difficult path that leads to self-government. We hope to make our administration of the ishonorable to our nation by making it of the highest benefit to the Filipinos them-selves; and as an earnest of what we intend to do, we point to what we have done. Already a greater measure of material prosper-ity and of governmental honesty and effici-ency has been attained in the Philippines than ever before in their history. "In dealing with the Philippine people we must show both patience and strength, forbearance and steadfast resolution. Our aim is high. We do not desire to do for the islanders merely what has elsewhere been done for tropic peoples by even the best foreign governments. W hope to do for them what has never before been done for any people of the tropics—to make them fit for selfgovernment after the fashion of the really

"To leave the islands at this time would mean that they would fall into a welter of murderous anarchy. Such desertion of duty on our part would be a crime against humanity. The character of Governor Taft and of his associates and subordinates is a proof, if such be needed, of the sincerity of our effort to give the islanders a constantly in-creasing measure of self-government, exactly as fast as they show themselves fit to exercise it. Since the civil government was established not an appointment has been made in the islands with any reference to considerations of political influence, or to aught else save the fitness of the man and the needs of the service. There are still troubles ahead in the islands. The insurrection has become an affair of local banditti and marauders, who deserve no higher regard than the brigands of portions of the old world. Encouragement, direct or indirect, to these insurrectos stands on the same footing as encouragement to hostile Indians in the days when we still had Indian wars. As we will do everything in our power for the Filipino who is peaceful, we will take the sternest measures with the Filipinos who follow the path of the insur-recto and the ladrone.

"The time has come when there should be additional legislation for the Philippines. to invite not merely saster, but the bitter-Nothing better can be done for the islands est shame and humiliation. Four thousand than to introduce industrial enterprises. Nothing would benefit them so throwing them open to industrial development. It is therefore necessary that the Congress should pass laws by which the resources of the islands can be developed; so that franchises (for limited terms of years) can be granted to companies doing business in them, and every encouragement be given to the incoming of business men of every

"I call your attention most earnestly to the crying need of a cable to Hawaii and the Philippines, to be continued from the Philppines to points in Asia. We should not defer a day longer than necessary the construction of such a cable. It is demanded not merely for commercial but for political and military considerations. "Either the Congress should immediately provide for the construction of a government cable, or else an arrangement should be made by which like advantages to those accruing from a government cable may be secured to the government by contract with

"No single great material work which remains to be undertaken on this continent is of such consequence to the American people as the building of a canal across the Isthmus connecting North and South America. While its beneficial effects would perhaps be most marked upon the Pacific coast and the gulf and South Atlantic states, it would also greatly benefit other sections. It is em-phatically a work which it is for the interest of the entire country to begin and complete as soon as possible; it is one of those great works which only a great nation can undertake with prospects of success, and which in the nation's material interests, but standing monuments to its constructive ability. that our negotiations on this subject with Great Britain, conducted on both sides in a spirit of friendliness and mutual good will and respect, have resulted in my being able to lay before the Senate a treaty which if ratified will enable us to begin preparations for an Isthmian canal at any time, and which guarantees to this nation every right that it has ever asked in connection with the canal. In this treaty, the old Clayton-Bulwer treaty, so long recognized as inadequate to supply the base for the construction and maintenance of a necessarily American ship canal, is abrogated. It specifically provides that the United States alone shall do the work of building and assume the responsi bility of safeguarding the canal and shall regulate its neutral use by all nations on terms of equality without the guaranty or interference of any outside nation from any quarter. The signed treaty will at once be laid before the Senate, and if approved the Congress can then proceed to give effect to the advantages it secures us by providing for the building of the canal. "The true end of every great and free people should be self-respecting peace; and this nation most earnestly desires sincere and cordial friendship with all others. Over the entire world, of recent years, wars between the great civilized powers have become less and less frequent. Wars with barbarous or smi-barbarous peoples come in an entirely different category, being merely a most regrettable but necessary international police duty which must be performed for the sake of the welfare of mankind. Peace can only be kept with certainty where both sides wish to keep it; but more and more the civilized peoples are realizing the wicked folly of war and are attaining that condition of just and intelligent regard for the rights of others which will in the end, as we hope and believe, make world-wide peace possible. The peace conference at The Hague gave definite expression to this hope and belief and marked a stride toward their attainment.

The Monroe Doctrine. "This same peace conference acquiesced in our statement of the Monroe doctrine as compatible with the purposes and aims of "The Monroe doctrine should be the cardinal feature of the foreign policy of all the nations of the two Americas, as it is of the United States. The doctrine is a declaration that there must be no territorial aggrandizement by any non-American power at the expense of any American power on American soil. It is in no wise intended as hostile to any nation in the old world. Still less is it intended to give cover to any aggression by one new world power at the expense of step, toward assuring the universal peace of the world by securing the possibility of permanent peace on this hemisphere.

"This doctrine has nothing to do with the commercial relations of any American power, save that it in truth allows each of them to form such as it desires. In other words, it is really a guaranty of the commercial independence of the Americas. We do not ask under this doctrine for any exclusive commercial dealings with any other American

Unless our commerce is always to be carried in foreign bottoms, we must have war craft to

"So far from being in any way a provocation to war, an adequate and highly trained navy is the best guaranty against war, the cheapest and most effective peace insurance. The cost of building and maintaining such a navy represents the very lightest premium for insuring paece which this nation can Probably no other great nation in the world is so anxious for peace as we are. There is not a single civilized power which has anything whatever to fear from aggressiveness on our part. All we want is peace; and toward this end we wish to be able to secure the same respect for our rights in return, to insure fair treatment to us commercially, and to guarantee the safety of the American people.

'Our people intend to abide by the Monroe doctrine and to insist upon it as the one sure means of securing the peace of the Western hemisphere. The navy offers us the only means of making our insistence the Monroe doctrine anything but a subject of derision to whatever nation chooses to disregard it. We desire the peace which comes as of right to the just man armed; not the peace granted on terms of ignomity to the craven and the weakling. "It is not possible to improvise a navy after war breaks out. The ships must be built and the men trained long in advance.

In the late war with Spain the ships that dealt the decisive blows at Manila and Santiago had been launched from two to fourteen years, and they were able to do as they did because the men in the conning towers, the gun turrets and the engine-rooms had through long years of practice at sea learned how to do their duty.

"It was forethought and preparation which secured us the overwhelming triumph of 1898. If we fail to show forethought and preparation now, there may come a time when disaster will befall us instead of triumph; and should this time come, the fault will rest the moment, but upon those who have failed to prepare in advance.

There should be no cessation in the work of completing our navy. It is unsafe and unwise not to provide this year for several additional battleships and heavy armored cruisers, with auxiliary and lighter craft in roportion; for the exact numbers and character I refer you to the report of the Secretary of the Navy. But there is something we need even more than additional ships, and this is additional officers and men. To pro-vide battleships and cruisers and then lay them up, with the expectation of leaving them unmanned until they are needed in actual war, would be worse than folly; it would be a crime against the nation-"To send any warship against a competent enemy unless those aboard it have been trained by years of actual sea service, in-cluding incessant gunnery practice, would be additional seamen and one thousand addiincrease in the officers should be provided by making a large addition to the classes at Annapolis.

Our Present Naval Force.

"We now have seventeen battleships appropriated for, of which nine are completed and have been commissioned for actual servce. The remaining eight will be ready in from two to four years, but it will take at least that time to recruit and train the men to fight them. It is of vast concern that we have trained crews ready for the vessels by the time they are commissioned. Good ships and good guns ar simply good weapons, and the best weapons are useless save in the nands of men who know how to fight with them. The men must be trained and drilled under a thorough and well-planned system of progressive instruction, while the recruitng must be carried on with still greater

The naval militia forces are state organiations, and are trained for coast service, and n event of war they will constitute the inner ine of defense. They should receive hearty encouragement from the general government "But in addition we should at once pro-vide for a National Naval Reserve, organized and trained under the direction of the Navy Department, and subject to the call of the Chief Executive whenever war becomes imminent. It should be a real auxiliary to the naval seagoing peace establishment, and of-fer material to be drawn on at once for manning our ships in time of war. It should be composed of graduates of the Naval Acadmy, graduates of the Naval Militia, officers and crews of coast-line steamers, longshore schooners, fishing vessels and steam yachts, together with the coast population about such centers as life-saving stations and lightlouses.

Need for Powerful Navy.

"The American people must either build and maintain an adequate navy or else make up their minds definitely to accept a secondary position in international affairs, not merely in political, but in commercial, matters. It has been well said that there is no surer way of courting national disaster than be 'opulent, aggressive, and unarmed.'
"It is not necessary to increase our army beyond its present size at this time. But it s necessary to keep it at the highest point of efficiency

"Every effort should be made to bring the rmy to a constantly increasing state of efficiency. When on actual service no work save that directly in the line of such service should be required. The paper work in the army, as in the navy, should be greatly reduced. What is needed is proved power of command and capacity to work well in the field. Constant care is necessary to prevent dry rot in the transportation and commissary departments.

"The Congress should provide means whereby it will be possible to have field exercises by at least a division of regulars, and if possible also a division of national guardsmen, once a year. "Only actual handling and providing for men in masses while they are marching, camping, embarking, and disembarking, will it be possible to train the higher officers to perform their duties well and smoothly.

"A great debt is owing from the public to the men of the army and navy. They should be so treated as to enable them to reach the highest point of efficiency, so that they may be able to respond instantly to any demand made upon them to sustain the interests of the nation and the honor of the flag. The individual American enlisted man is prob ably on the whole a more formidable fighting man than the regular of any other army. Every consideration should be shown him, and in return the highest standard of use fulness should be exacted from him. It is well worth while for the Congress to con sider whether the pay of enlisted men upor second and subsequent enlistments should not be increased to correspond with the increased value of the veteran soldier.

Militia Laws Obsolete.

"Action should be taken in reference to the militia and to the raising of volunteer forces. Our militia law is obsolete and worthless. The organization and armament of the National Guard of the several states, which are treated as militia in the appropriations by the Congress, should be made identical with those provided for the regular forces. The obligations and duties of the Guard in time any other. It is simply a step, and a long of war should be carefully defined, and a the steps taken to secure to the United States vstem established by law under which the method of procedure of raising volunteer forces should be prescribed in advance. It is utterly impossible in the excitement and haste of impending war to do this satisfactorily if the arrangements have not been made long beforehand. Provision should be made for utilizing in the first volunteer or-ganizations called out the training of those citizens who have already had experience under arms, and especially for the selection i advance of the officers of any force which may be raised; for careful selection of the kind necessary is impossible after the outbreak of war.

"That the army is not at all a mere instrument of destruction has been shown dur-ing the last three years. In the Philippines, Cuba and Porte Rico it has proved itself a plement for the upbuilding of a peaceful civilization.

Eulogy of Veterans. "No other citizens deserve so well of the republic as the veterans, the survivors of

in fact as well as in name; we are united in our devotion to the flag which is the symbol of all national greatness and unity; and the very completeness of our union enables us all, in every part of the country, to glory in the valor shown alike by the sons of the North and the sons of the South in the times that tried men's souls.

Merit System Endorsed.

"The merit system of making appointments is in its essence as democratic and American as the common schools system itself. It simply means that in clerical and other positions where the duties are entirely non-political, all applicants should have a fair field and no favor, each standing on his merits as he is able to show them by practical test. ten competitive examinations offer the only available means in many cases for applying his system. In other cases, as where laborers are employed, a system of registra-tion undoubtedly can be widely extended, There are, of course, places where the written competitive examination cannot be applied, and others where it offers by no means an ideal solution, but where under existing political conditions it is, though an imperfect means, yet the best present means of getting satisfactory results.

"It is important to have this system obtain at home, but it is even more important to have it applied rigidly in our insular pos-sessions. The administration of these islands partisan politics as the administration of the army and navy. All that we ask from the public servant in the Philippines or Porto Rice is that he reflect honor on his country by the way in which he makes that coun-try's rule a benefit to the peoples who have come under it. This is all that we should ask, and we cannot afford to be content with

Treatment of Indians.

The message points out the defects in our present consular service, and recommends the passage of bills now before Congress that will increase its efficiency. Of the Indian problem it says-

"In my judgment the time has arrived when we should definitely make up our minds to recognize the Indian as an individual and not as a member of a tribe. The General Allotment Act is a mighty pulverizing engine primarily, not upon those whom the acci- to break up the tribal mass. It acts direct-dent of events puts in supreme command at ly upon the family of the individual. Under its provisions some sixty thousand Indians have already become citizens of the United States. We should now break up the tribal funds, doing for them what allotment does for the tribal lands; that is, they should be divided into individual holdings. A stop should be put upon the indiscriminate per-mission to Indians to lease their allotments. The effort should be steadily to make the Indian work like any other man on his own ground. The marriage laws of the Indians should be made the same as those of the whites

'In dealing with the aboriginal races few things are more important than to preserve them from the terrible physical and moral degradation resulting from the liquor traffic. We are doing all we can to save our own Indian tribes from this evil. Wherever by international agreement this same end can be attained as regards races where we do not possess exclusive control, every effort should made to bring it about. "I bespeak the most cordial support from the Congress and the people for the St. Louis Exposition to Commemorate the One Hun-dredth Anniversary of the Louisiana Purchase. This purchase was the greatest instance of expansion in our history. It definitely decided that we were to become a great continental republic, by far the fore-most power in the Western Hemisphere. The national government should be represented the exposition by a full and complete set of exhibits. "The people of Charleston, with great energy and civic spirit, are carrying on an ex-position which will continue throughout most of the present session of the Congress. heartily commend this exposition to the good will of the people. It deserves all the encouragement that can be given it 'For the sake of good administration, sound conomy, and the advancement of science, the Census Office as now constituted should be made a permanent government bureau. This would insure better, cheaper and more sat-isfactory work, in the interest not only of our business but of statistic, economic and Growth of Postal Service.

"The remarkable growth of the postal service is shown in the fact that its revenues have doubled and its expenditures have nearly doubled within twelve years. Its progresive development compels constantly increasing outlay, bu, in this period of business energy and prosperity its receipts grow so much faster than its expenses that the annual deficit has been steadily reduced from $11,411,779 in 1897 to $3,923,727 in 1991. Among recent postal advances the success of rural free delivery wherever established has been so marked, and actual experience has made its benefits so plain, that the demand for its extension is general and urgent.
"It is just that the great agricultural population should share in the improvement of the service. The number of rural routes now in operation is 6,009, practically all established within three years, and there are 6,000 appli-cations awaiting action. It is expected that the number in operation at the close of the current fiscal year will reach 8,600. The mail will then be daily carried to the doors of 5,700,000 of our people who have heretofore been dependent upon distant offices, and onethird of all that portion of the country which is adapted to it will be covered by this kind of service. Second-Class Mail Matter.

'The full measure of postal progress which might be realized has long been hampered and obstructed by the heavy burden imposed on the government through the intrenche and well-understood abuses which have grown up in connection with second class mail matter. The extent of this burden appears when it is stated that while the second-class matter makes nearly three-fifths of the weight of all the mail, it paid for the last fiscal year only $4,294,445 of the aggregate postal revenue of $111,631,193. pound rate of postage, which produces the large loss thus entailed, and which was fixed by the Congress with the purpose of encouraging the dissemination of public information, were limited to the legitimate newspapers and periodicals actually contemplated y the law, no just exception could be taken, that expense would be the recognized and accepted cost of a liberal public policy de-liberately adopted for a justifiable end. But much of the matter which enjoys the privieged rate is wholly outside of the intent of the law, and has secured admission only through an evasion of its requirements or brough lax construction. The proportion of such wrongly included matter is by postal experts to be one-balf of the whole volume of second-class mai. If it be only one-third or one-quarter, the magnitude of the burden is apparent. The Postoffice Department has now undertaken to remove the abuses so far as is possible by a stricter ap-plication of the law; and it should be susained in its effort. "We view with lively interest and keen hopes of beneficial results the proceedings of the Pan-American Congress, convoked at the invitation of Mexico, and now sitting Mexican capital. The delegates of the States are under the most liberal instructions to co-operate with their colleagues in all matters promising advantage to the great family of American commonwealths, as well in their relations among themselves as in their domestic advancement and in their intercourse with the world at large. The occurrences arising from the "Boxer" outbreak in China are reviewed in detail, and its share of the trade of the Orient are en plained. The message concludes:

"The death of Queen Victoria caused the people of the United States deep and heartfelt sorrow, to which the government gave full expression. When Fresident McKinley died, our nation in turn received from every quarter of the British empire expressions of grief and sympathy no less sincere. The death of the Empress Dowager Frederick of Germany also aroused the genuine sympathy of the American people; and this sympathy of the American people; and this sympathy was cordially reciprocated by Germany when the President was assassinated. Indeed from every quarter of the civilized world we received, at the time of the President's death, assurances of such grief and regard as to touch the hearts of our people. In the midst of our affliction we reversally thank the Almighty that we are at peace with the nations of mankind; and we firmly intend that our policy shall be such as to continue untroken policy shall be such as to continue untroken these international relations of mutual respect and good will.

HINTS FOR WOMEN How to Secure a Perfect Complexion

by Natural Means—An Easy Way to Beautify the Skin and Obtain a Good

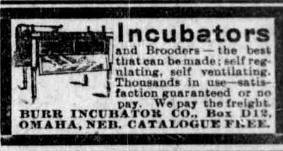

It is every woman's wish to be possessed of a clear and beautiful skin. but how few are thus fortunate. A pale and sallow complexion is far too common and a fresh, healthy color is so uncommon as to be the cause of favorable remark when seen anywhere. It is a matter of fact that the condition of the skin is an index to the health of the body. Therefore, to improve a bad complexion, the right way, and the only sure way, is to go back to the cause. In almost every case it will be found that the blood is out of order and needs building up. This was the case with Miss Gracie B. King, of No. 35 Russell street, Lewiston, Me.

"My color had left my face," she says, "and my health failed. I suffered from nervousness, dizziness and loss of appetite; not enough to confine me to the bed but troublesome enough so as to interfere with my work. Oftentimes I experienced a faintness at the stomach which made me feel miserable.

"During the summer of 1900 a friend who had been troubled as I was, and who had been helped by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, recommended them to me. I began to take them at once and had not used up a box before I felt a decided change for the better in my condition. Now I do not like to be without them."

The disease from which Miss King suffered was anaemia. It is characterized by a palid complexion, pale lips, dull eyes, tongue and gums bloodless; shortness of breath on slight exertion-especially upon going upstairs; palpitation of the heart, feeling of impending death; weakness, loss of appetite and ambition; irregularity and pain in the natural functions of wom-

The one remedy that has proved itself a specific for anaemia is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. These pills, taken in increasing doses, will never fail to effect a cure if used persistently for a reasonable length of time. They are sold in boxes (never in bulk) at fifty cents a box or six boxes for two dollars and fifty cents, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. Be sure and get the genuine; substitutes never cured anybody.
