mies of trades unionism ammunition for many a day.

For years I have been going up and down this country boasting of the splendid spirit of trades union leaders, of their fight for the purest democracy and their demand for a square deal; but what can a man say in the face of this? It is not a question of personal character. The big principle that is involved is the right of an American citizen, even though he be a trades unionist, to belong to any kind of an organization that he chooses, provided he believes that that organization is not detrimental to the interests of the workingman. What right has a convention of labor—or any other convention—to dictate what shall be a man's religious, economic or social affiliations? If the workingmen of America can't trust Mitchell, whom, among their number, can they trust? He has not been found guilty of treason to organized labor, but has stood squarely in conventions and in conferences for an absolutely square deal to all concerned. Can a man do more than this?

It has been meanly charged that Mitchell has worn a dress suit and that he has dined with millionaires. What of it? If he had cared to do so, he might have made this a common practice, for he has had the opportunity of getting a better job than the workingmen of this country have ever offered him. He has the brains and the ability to make good on some of the biggest propositions that are being offered by the corporations.

I am sorry—mighty sorry that the thing has been done. It won't hurt Mitchell. It will come back as a boomerang upon the men who are responsible for this foolish and shortsighted policy. But, worse than this, it will react upon the entire labor movement in America.—Rev. Charles Stelzle.

WM. BARTLEMAN DEAD.

William Bartleman, one of the best known employing barbers of Lincoln, died at the home of his brother, Arch, at Harvard, Neb., on Monday, March 6. Mr. Bartelman had been in poor health for several months, and when attacked by grip was unable to withstand it. Six weeks ago he was compelled to quit work, and when he grew rapidly worse he was taken to his brother's home in Harvard. Within a few hours after reaching that city he passed away. Mr. Bartelman resided in Bethany, and conducted one of Lincoln's largest shops on South Twelfth street.

LOOK FOR THE LABEL.

The anti-union organization of Lincoln is paying particular attention to the work of discriminating against the label of the allied printing trades. This will explain why a number of candidates have handed out cards minus the "joker." Maybe these candidates are wise. The men who are fighting the label have a habit of sticking together when their interests demand it, while union men have a habit of scattering all around and paying no attention to their interests on election day. But now is a good time to put the rollers under the men who listen to the union busting outfit.
