WILL MAUPIN'S WEEKLY

WOMEN AS STRIKERS.

Persistent In Devising Means to Worry the Employers.

At a recent meeting of the Women's Trade Union league in New York Miss Younger of California told her eastern sisters about the persistence of the western trade union women. The publicity committee thus chronicles the occasion:

"She described how in the face of almost insurmountable difficulties several thousand laundry workers defied the men in their trade and went out on strike, subsequently winning a victory for themselves and their skeptical brother workers.

"She brought forth laughter and appreciation by telling how the waitresses went out on strike in one of the largest restaurants. Unable to come to terms with their employers, they sent forth a number of pickets, who kept shouting, 'Unfair house, unfair house!'

"They were arrested and forbidden to continue their exercise. The next evening a number of women were selling matches in front of the same place, and each purchaser was informed that the restaurant in question was unfair. As soon as the firm found it out it secured an injunction against the Waitresses' union forbidding it to carry on the trade. But the following evening matches were being sold by a group of men, and the firm took out a second injunction, this time against the Waiters' union. They were followed by the cooks as match sellers, and when these were restrained the dishwashers took up the sale. At last these, too, met the same fate as the other workers in their trade. The whole restaurant industry was now in the clutches of the court, and the striking girls were at their wits' end what to do next when a twentieth century Portia hit upon a brilliant scheme which helped the workers and turned the ridicule of the people upon the wise justice.

"At the usual hour in front of the scab restaurant appeared a good sized donkey carrying an 'Unfair House' sign.

"In posthaste the enraged employers took the animal to court, where a judge declared that he could not issue an injunction against a donkey."

BUY LABEL GOODS.

Dr. Elliot, the man made famous by Harvard university, is a scientific boycotter. He says: "In an intelligent and wide awake democracy which does not dread but rather likes the new or novel and is not the slave of tradition the consumption of any article which has become subject to a monopoly may be suddenly and effectively reduced. Even the most solid monopolies fear the abstinence of the consumer."

The union label permits us to apply the above philosophy of the learned Dr. Elliot by the indirect but no less effective method of rewarding our friends. In promoting a demand for the products of union labor as distinguished by the union label we at the same time punish our enemies.

BETTER SAVE THAN SORRY.

A very trite old adage, but full of horse sense. Most of us could get along with just a bit less now, but the time will come when we may need more to get along with. Now is the time to make provision for the then. A few dollars deposited with us now and then will accumulate rapidly. We pay Four Per Cent Interest on deposits. What you spend today will not be available tomorrow. Saving is a habit easily cultivated and well worth the cultivation. Begin right now. Call and let us explain our system to you.
