

An Anchor to Windward

As the mariner casts an anchor to windward to prevent his ship drifting on the rocks, so should the wage earner do. The saving, systematic saving, of a portion of one's salary each week, and depositing it where it will draw interest, is an anchor that will prevent one's bark from drifting on the rocks of adversity when old age or sickness come—as come they will. Saving is as much a habit as profligacy, but it is a far better one. It is never too late to begin the cultivation of the habit of saving. Begin now by depositing with us a portion of your every pay check. We'll put it to work for you. FOUR PER CENT INTEREST paid on deposits. Give us an opportunity to explain our method of doing business—a method successful for more than a decade.

POLITENESS OUT OF PLACE

Old Lawyer Did Not Want His Client to Think He Could Get Free Advice.

Politeness is politeness, but business is just business. One of the clerks of the supreme court tried to combine the two the other day, but hereafter he is going to attend strictly to business. He was anxious to destroy the common belief of many persons who visit the New York county courthouse that little courtesy is shown by the attaches to those seeking information. The clerk was standing in the corridor on the second floor when two men came along, one of them gray haired. The younger one asked the elder the way out of the building. The clerk heard the query and at once told the questioner several ways he could get out. The older man turned on the clerk with the injunction to mind his own business, adding that he had been in the building before the clerk was born and could himself answer his companion. A little later the old man looked up the clerk and apologized, explaining that the man who wanted to know how to get out of the building was his client and that he did not want him to get the idea that he could receive free advice. "If he gets that notion," said the old practitioner, "I'll lose him as a client."

BELGIAN TRADE SCHOOLS.

Industrial Education Promoted Over Twenty-five Years Ago.

Some twenty-five years ago the first trade school was opened in Liege. Its purpose was to teach the principles of dressmaking. Since that time the growth and development of trade schools have been most rapid. At present almost every existing trade has its training school for the young artisan.

Schools exist for training the ironworker, the woodworker and the workers in zinc, lead and leather. The decorative arts, plumbing and house painting are also taught. If the present rate of development in this direction continues Belgium will soon rival Germany, in which country these branches of instruction are probably superior to those of any other European country.

In the matter of trade schools in Belgium the province of Liege merits particular attention, as it is especially in advance in this direction. The large list of existing trade schools has lately been added to through the opening recently of an institution for teaching printing, bookbinding, lithography, etc. It has been organized under the patronage of an association known as the Chambre Syndicale des Patrons-Imprimeurs de l'Arrondissement de Liege. This institution is to produce first class printers, lithographers and bookbinders, giving them sufficient general instruction to enable them to become efficient and up to date artisans. The school is under the control of an executive committee, consisting of three members, representatives of the government, the province and the city of Liege respectively. The corps of teachers comprises twelve members—namely, one director, one professor of ornamentation, seven of typography, one of bookbinding, one of lithography and one of French. Five years are required to complete the course.

Unions Given Power.

The Massachusetts legislature has passed a law giving unions the right to fine their members in conformity with the rules of such unions. The act provides that "no fine or notice of intention to impose a fine by any union or any other association, incorporated or unincorporated, by any authorized representative thereof, upon any member thereof, according to the rules thereof, to which such member has agreed to conform, shall be held to be unlawful or coercive as to such member or as to any other person, provided that such fine is reasonable in amount and is for a purpose which is legal."

Strikers Denied Right of Appeal.

Fourteen striking coal miners of Lafayette and Louisville, Colo., members of the United Mine Workers of America, who were tried at Denver before Judge Greeley Whitford on charges of contempt in disregarding the court's injunction against violence and intimidation, were found guilty by Judge Whitford and received sentences ranging from imprisonment in the jail for one year to fines of $250 and costs. Attorneys for the miners were denied the right of appeal to the supreme court, but were allowed thirty days to file a bill of exceptions.

Importance Recognized.

"Do you think that man fully appreciates the importance of the office to which we have elected him?" said one constituent.

"I guess he does," replied the other. "The first thing he did was to say it ought to command a larger salary."

Increase of Knowledge.

The mild-mannered man was so well informed about past, present and future dates of suffragists' meetings that some one ventured the opinion that his wife must be one of the chief supporters of the cause.

"You're away off there," said another. "That chap isn't even married. He's a hotel clerk, and has to add suffragist meetings to his church, theater and political calendar for the benefit of women travelers. Out-of-town women who want to be up with the procession place those meetings at the head of New York's attractions. They haven't time to look up the dates for themselves, so the accommodating clerks keep tabs for them."
