

Savings Unparalleled in Fine Clothing

OUR BUYERS were called east last week by clothing manufacturers, who, becoming alarmed by the slow up of orders due to the extreme backwardness of the season, were anxious to dispose of their accumulated stocks. The manufacturers, whose products are known from coast to coast for their superiority and excellence of quality, made such an attractive proposition that we bought and bought liberally. And we are prepared to hold the bargain event of the year. Your sense of thrift demands that you attend this sale

Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Nebraska, as second-class mail matter, under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

THE EDITORIAL CONVENTION.

Once more Lincoln has attempted to properly entertain the newspaper men and women of Nebraska. However short the city may have fallen in its endeavors, it at least did its best. It went its limit in an effort to show its appreciation of the men and women who are working day and night for the upbuilding of Nebraska.

Lincoln wants the good will, the supporting friendship of the newspaper men and women of Nebraska. It wants them to know that it appreciates their powerful influence for good, their splendid work in the upbuilding of the commonwealth. It frankly admits that it needs their friendship and support, and that it is actuated by enlightened self-interest when it goes its limit in entertaining them within its gates. It would be rank foolishness to claim anything else. The editors could not be deceived thereby, but would penetrate the deception and cheerfully resent it. So Lincoln admits that it has a motive. It wants to show its appreciation of the many supporting efforts put forth in its behalf by the newspapers of Nebraska, and it wants to give the newspaper people every opportunity to see that that support has been merited.

When Nebraska editors and publishers come to Lincoln they ought to know that they have come to their own. They are not guests in the strict meaning of that word. It is their capital city; it is a city they have been important factors in making; it is a city that they are, or ought to be, interested in. Lincoln could plug along without their friendship, but it would just plug along. With their friendship it can, and will, grow and prosper as befits her place as the second city of the commonwealth and its political center.

Lincoln hopes that the editors recently within her gates enjoyed themselves to the limit. If it failed in any respect as a host, it was through sheer inability to go any further in the effort to make good.

Col. M. A. Bates, editor of the Plattsmouth Journal, has just celebrated his 70th birthday. Col. Bates is old only in number of years. He is one of those who never grow old in spirit. He has kept his heart young through all the years, and as a result he is always cheerful, always active and always working for the common good. He is publishing one of the best newspapers in Nebraska, putting into its columns the ripened experience of a half-century of newspaper hustling. We have known Col. Bates for many years, and we hope that he will be privileged to know him for many years to come. Here's hoping he lives another seventy years!

Kansas is throwing her usual bluff about wanting 30,000 harvest hands. Kansas, of course, does not need them. We harvest more wheat per capita in Nebraska than Kansas does, yet we manage to get along without "four-flushing" about it. It is a part of the Kansas advertising methods. Maybe it pays—and maybe not. But it is a sure thing that Kansas does profit by her publicity campaign, and Nebraska ought to get into the running. But Nebraska is not going to try and delude honest workers by any such guff as Kansas gets off every year about wanting harvest hands.

No apologies are offered for the dull appearance of Will Maupin's Weekly this week. Once a year the editor foregathers with his professional brethren, and the first three days of the present week were the days. And we insist on having at least a week to recover from the effects of it. When we were younger we could get over 'em in a couple of days.

Heaven only knows what kind of a toastmaster Will Owen Jones might have made had he been allowed to go through with it. The money sent abroad to purchase articles that are made or sold at home is merely kissing goodbye the money that ought to be kept at home to build up the business institutions of Nebraska.

The sight of a host of Nebraskans starting on a big trip and taking a railroad that doesn't get a mile into Nebraska territory, would have been disappointing. It will not be seen, however. Nebraskans are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of standing by Nebraska's institutions.

The Aurora Republican mournfully asserts that if elected governor Morehead "would not seek the advice of such men as Bryan and Metcalfe." Will the esteemed Republican assure us that Aldrich, if re-elected, will seek the advice of the two great democrats mentioned?

Lincoln was mighty proud to entertain the Nebraska editors and editresses. But try as she may, Lincoln can make but small return to the newspapers of the state for all the favors they have shown the Capital City.

"Capital removal" is a pretty good subject for those editors who are disinclined to hustle around for real live news, or prone to seek editorial subjects for discussion that do not require deep thinking.

Here's more power to the Lincoln health department! It is doing good work, and it ought to have a free hand and ample means to prosecute its campaign for public safety.

Those Nebraska editors who still have sizzling banquet speeches stored up in their systems need not feel lonesome. We've had many a one corked up within us.

The Lincoln Commercial Club knows how to play the host to perfection, and it did itself justice in its entertainment of the editorial convention.

Roosevelt is a great precedent buster, yet he isn't the first man to betray friends, sacrifice the interests of others and swallow his own solemn utterances in order to advance his personal ambitions.

We need more development of Nebraska's natural resources and a curtailment of the natural cussedness of those who "knock" on every proposed enterprise.

Swat the "knoekers" and "kickers" and "grouches!"

Swat the fly!

SOLE DOCTOR

It's the Soles of the people I keep in view,
For I am the doctor of Boot and Shoe,
And I serve the living and not the dead,
With the best of leather, wax, nails and thread,
I can sew on a sole, or nail it fast,
And do a good job and make it last.
There is nothing Snide about what I can do—
Doubt not my statement, for work proves it true.
I can give you a lift, too, in this life—
Not only you, but your family and wife.
A great many patients come to my door
Worn out and run down, besides feeling sore;
Though I don't use poultice, plaster or pill,
I can cure all sick shoes, no matter how ill.
