Harvest Special AND Labor Day Edition

The issue of Will Maupin's Weekly for August 30 will be the ninth annual Labor Day edition. This year it will be combined with a "Harvest Special" number, making it doubly interesting and valuable.

It will tell you about Nebraska's resources and possibilities.

It will tell you of Nebraska's history.

It will be a complete text book of Nebraska.

It will be printed on heavy book paper with illuminated cover.

It will be the handsomest edition of this newspaper ever published and that's a promise.

A destructive hail storm about one mile wide crossed the irrigated section at the big bend on Wet Sheep creek about twelve miles northwest of Morrill, Nebr., Monday evening. All small grain and corn was totally destroyed as well as the second crop of alfalfa.

New York—The passenger steamer Old Colony ran down and sunk a fishing yacht off the Battery Wednesday. Fishermen, bound for the fishing banks, were rescued from the sinking craft, which was submerged, having her mast and pennant clear of the water.

NELLIE GRANT WEDS AGAIN

The marriage recently of Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris to Frank H. Jones, a Chicago banker, was in sharp contrast to her first marriage, 38 years ago, to Algernon J. Sartoris, an Irish army officer.

Nellie Grant was then the idol of the nation and her marriage took place in the east room of the White House while her distinguished father was president. It was one of the greatest social events the White House had seen up to that time, or perhaps since. Simple, amiable and unaffected, Nellie Grant, the only daughter of General Grant, had endeared herself to the American people and she went with her husband to their English home accompanied by the heartiest good wishes.

In England she was presented to Queen Victoria and dined at Windsor Castle. Yet her life in England proved most unhappy. Her husband treated her with injustice and cruelty, so much so that her father-in-law's sympathy was aroused in her behalf and he made earnest efforts to effect a restoration of good feeling between husband and wife. Failing in this, he gave her a small London house in Cadogan place, forced his son to give her a country home near Hampton and settled a handsome income upon her. Upon his death, in 1890, he left her the town house in which she had lived after her separation from her husband and also settled upon her $35,000 a year.

Three years after the death of the elder Sartoris her husband died and Mrs. Sartoris received the principal of his income, as guardian of her children, and the lease of the country house.

BIDDLE'S UNIQUE METHODS

It is a far cry from prize fighting to religion. At first blush it seems most sacrilegious to associate the two subjects. But it has been done successfully not only in words but in deeds, and, as results have proven, it is the basis of one of the most remarkable religious movements this country has ever seen.

The man back of this novel idea for furthering the cause of Christianity is Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, millionaire, of Philadelphia, Pa., who but a few years back became famous as an amateur boxer and an object of criticism and source of disgust to the ultra-exclusive set of the Quaker City of which he is a member. But withal, "Tony" Biddle proved himself a practical pugilist—one who loved the manly art only for the manliness which it brought out; one who stood for honesty and high ideals and who was ever a gentleman.

When Mr. Biddle conceived the idea of his Bible class movement, his secret motive—if such it may be called—was to introduce athletics as an inducement to young men, and when he took charge of his first class in the Sunday school of Holy Trinity Protestant Episcopal church, Philadelphia, four years ago, he had but three members, and the attendance of the school was very slim at the time.

So rapidly has the Drexel Biddle Bible class grown that it now numbers 700 members, and it is the ambition of the originator to make it of national scope.

MARSHALL NEW IN POLITICS

Gov. Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana, the Democratic nominee for vice-president, rode to the front of his party on a wave of reform. But the Indiana wave was not so bolstered as those that broke on the New Jersey coast and elsewhere. Governor Marshall believes in reform—in moderation. Also he believes in progress—with moderation. He does not believe that this great and glorious commonwealth is going to the "demnitator bow-wows;" in fact, he points with pride to his belief that the country is just a little bit better politically financially and morally than ever before.

It required heroic measures on the part of his friends to induce Governor Marshall to take his presidential chances seriously, and even then he refused to allow any effort to be made in his behalf outside of Indiana.

Governor Marshall was born in Manchester, Ind., in 1854 and has spent his entire fifty-eight years in his native state. He was graduated from Wabash college in 1873, when he was twenty-one years old. He practiced law in Columbia City, Ind., until he was elected governor two years ago. He is a member of many clubs and holds LL.D. degrees from Wabash, Notre Dame and the University of Pennsylvania. He married Miss Lois I. Kimsey of Angola, Ind., in 1885.

In the Literary State they call Marshall the "Little Giant." When one sees him for the first time he wonders why, because there is nothing colossal about the slender, undersized man with sloping shoulders and quiet mien. His hair and mustache turning from gray to white, do not bristle, his brows do not "bottle" so one can notice it and even his violet-blue eyes are mild. It is only when one knows him and his political history that that "Little Giant" term is understood.

HILL'S REMARKABLE CAREER

The retirement of James J. Hill from his position as chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern railroad, which has just become effective, was officially announced Monday from the office of the company at St. Paul.

The resignation of Mr. Hill was presented to the board of directors June 7, and unofficial reports of the changes were made at the time, but the statement with which Mr. Hill accompanies his resignation was made public only a few days ago.

Louis W. Hill, who was recently succeeded by Carl R. Gray as president of the Great Northern, succeeds his father as chairman of the board of directors. James J. Hill will remain a member of the executive committee of the board.

With his retirement Mr. Hill completed thirty-three years of active service in the northwest, beginning with his purchase of an interest in the St. Paul and Pacific, of which he was made general manager, to the time of his resignation from the office which he has held for five years, since he resigned the presidency of the Great Northern road.

James J. Hill rose from a job as a day laborer to the presidency of the Great Northern railroad. He was cut out for the pulpit, dreamed in his youth of war and literature, and when a man turned his tremendous energies to the making of money. He was born in Guelph, Ont., in 1838.

Washington.—John Mitchell, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, who, with President Gompers and Secretary Morrison, was adjudged guilty of contempt of court in renewed proceedings several weeks ago, was Tuesday sentenced by Justice Wright to serve nine months in jail. Mitchell was not in court when sentence was pronounced, having waived his right. His counsel immediately noted an appeal. At the close of the trial Justice Wright offered to Mitchell to suspend sentence if he promised hereafter to adhere to all court orders, but Mitchell spurned the tender.

Attempts to Swim Channel. Boulogne.—Jabez Wolfe, the well-known amateur swimmer, started on another attempt to swim across the English channel Monday. He entered the water in the vicinity of Cape Grinez at a quarter past 4 and at 7 o'clock was seven miles to the north of that point on the French coast. At that hour a brisk breeze sprang up, making the water rather choppy.

Must Take the Examination.

The attorney general's department has given an opinion holding that chiropractors who treat physical or mental ailments for hire violate the law unless they take an examination before the state board of health and obtain a certificate to practice medicine. The same holding applies to Christian scientists, says the attorney general, under an old decision of the supreme court.

Part of the Nebraska national guard will be allowed to attend the Pole Mountain, Wyo., army maneuvers July 28 to Aug. 6, if plans projected by Adjutant General Phelps are carried out. In a telegram to the war department at Washington the head of the Nebraska guard conveyed the information to the war department that the First regiment would take that trip providing the $20,000 voted by the recent army bill in congress would be forthcoming in the near future.

Thousand Island park on St. Lawrence river has been swept by a disastrous fire which wiped out practically the entire business section, the Columbian hotel, the New York state educational building and eighty-seven cottages. The loss, it is estimated, will be approximately $500,000.
