CURRENT COMMENT

Nebraska has made progress along other lines than the development of her resources. She has developed wonderfully along political lines. Here she is, right in the middle of a presidential campaign, and she isn't sweating blood, rending her nether garments or pawing the circumambient atmosphere. She is attending to business, looking to the future with hope and possessing her soul in patience. Twenty years ago this time she would have neglected everything looking like business to get out upon the corner and yawp in seventeen languages. Her children would have been lugging evil-smelling kerosene torches or blowing through flambeaux. Not so now. It takes an orator of international reputation to get out a crowd as big as an ordinary dog fight would attract. And it pleases us mightily that this is so. It demonstrates beyond question that Nebraskans are thoughtful students, close observers and quite beyond the danger of political hysteria.

We have never succumbed to the automobile bug, and for a number of reasons. First, we never had money enough to buy one, and of course the other reason are not material. We admit, however, that we've spent enough for baby carriages in the last twenty-five years to have purchased quite some buzz wagon. Other than this kind of a horseless carriage we never expect to own.

October 1 every newspaper, magazine and periodical in the United States must file with the postoffice authorities full information concerning itself—its owners, stockholders, editors, publishers, political affiliation, etc. Will Maupin's Weekly will forestall the government in this. It is owned absolutely by Will M. Maupin. It is edited by him, and published by him. It is as independent as porker on ice, its circulation is all that is claimed, there are no strings on it, and the subscription price is one dollar a year—which we need.

Unless somebody lies like sin, it is going to be interesting to note the information filed by such newspapers as the New York Sun, the New York Press, Cincinnati Enquirer, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and others of their class. And such magazines as Harper's, Scribner's, Judge, and others of like class. The intent of the law is all right, but like a lot of other "reforms," it is the same old kind of an iridescent dream that John J. Ingalls mentioned.

It's none of our business, of course, but we feel impelled to admit that we can not understand how Robert Beecher Howell can hold on to his job as member of the republican national committee, and at the same time be a member of the so-called progressive party. Maybe Brer Howell can understand it. But it strikes us that he is much in the position of a Baptist preacher who would renounce belief in baptism by immersion and still hang on to his job as pastor of a Baptist church. We admire Brer Howell for his many admirable traits, but he is disappointing us by not doing the square thing and resigning as a member of the committee of a party he no longer affiliates with and whose candidate he is seeking to defeat.

The State Horticultural society will hold its annual apple show in the Auditorium in Lincoln. We have not consulted any of the officers of the society, but we'll venture to say they will gladly give space to exhibits from the much vaunted apple country of the northwest, providing our northwestern friends will guarantee a fair statement of the facts in the newspapers of that region. We are right here to say that when it comes to apples, apple lands and possibilities for orcharding for profit, Nebraska has got the northwest states crouching behind the refrigerator and pleading for help.

What a lot of kindly assistants the editors have these days. They offer to provide us with all the copy we can possibly use. Here is a long article from the "progressive national committee," telling why Thomas A. Edison is for Roosevelt. We are notified that we are at liberty to use the article and that it may be published any time after September 23. By the side of it is a wad of stuff from the republican national committee, and we are assured by the aforesaid committee that the people are yearning for just such reading matter. Again we are at liberty to use it, paying the composition bills out of our own pocket. And the democratic national committee pats us on the back, paregorically speaking, telling us what a fine fellow we are—and asking us to print about seven columns of hogwash written by some political hack writer who has got a stand-in with some big man on the committee. And while these committees are asking the "country press" to publish their stuff without price, they are paying enormous prices for space in the big magazines. You'll look a long, long time ere you see any of this "national committee" hogwash in the columns of this little newspaper.

Not until Woodrow Wilson comes to Lincoln will he know what a real western welcome means.

STORY OF QUEER PLAY

Pitcher Strikes Out Player and Makes Out Himself.

Rube Kissinger Recovers Lost Ball From Behind Catcher's Mask in Time to Retire Batsman and Win Game for His Team.

Odd occurrences in baseball are of interest to the fans, especially if they are acquainted with the players who figure in them.

Arthur Irwin used to tell of how he won a game for Boston with a hit that bounced through a knothole in the fence, and of another occasion when he scored from first base on the in-field grounder when the ball got tangled up in the shortstop's sweater coat.

Al Shaw hit a ball in Macon that bounced into the pocket of a workman's coat, which was hanging on the fence. A smart outfielder secured the ball in time to hold Shaw on second.

But Elmer Steele, Toronto's pitcher, has a story that puts all these plays in the remote background. It is no less than a pitcher making a strike-out by himself, and thereby winning the game.

The pitcher was Rube Kissinger, well known in Toronto and on the international league circuit, and the game in question was played at Newark, with Providence and Newark the competing clubs. Steele was pitching for the Grays.

Newark led by 2 to 1, but Providence had two men on bases in the ninth and two out. A hit would win the game, but Kissinger was equal to the emergency. He cut one across the middle of the plate.

"Strike one," the umpire said. A spitter fooled the batter, who missed it a foot, and the count was "strike two."

Then followed two "wasters," but the batter would not bite. Another spitter right over the heart of the plate.

The batter took a good healthy swing, there was a tick of the bat, and everybody started to run.

Larry Spahr, who was catching for Newark, looked around aimlessly in vain search for the missing ball.

"Stand still, Larry," yelled Kissinger, "don't move," and he ran towards the plate.

Spahr followed instructions implicitly, and stood stock still.

Kissinger came running up, reached for Spahr's neck, and pulled out the ball, which was stuck between the mask and the pad.

"Foul ball, three strikes, batter out," announced the umpire, and the game was over.

Kissinger was given the putout in the official score, as he made the play, and Steel says he is the only pitcher that ever struck a batter out in this manner.

SHECKARD IS REAL VETERAN

Cub Outfielder Has Been Playing Professional Baseball for Over Seventeen Years.

Men who play with their heads as well as their hands have proved that it is possible to stay a long time in professional baseball. There are several men still very much in the game who may yet break or at least equal Cy Young's record. They are not, however, pitchers. James Tilden Sheckard is one of the veterans in whom the baseball public is very much interested. Jimmy broke into the game as far back as 1895, when he played with the Marietta and Lancaster semi-professional teams. Thence he moved to Portsmouth, Va., going in the following year to Brockton, in New England.

Brooklyn corralled him next, and after one year with Baltimore he went back across the bridge again. With the rest of his baseball career every small boy is familiar, especially the small boy of Brooklyn, where James was popular. Toward the close of his term with the Brooklyn team Sheckard's work fell off, and there were those who said that he was shirking. He spruced up promptly when he went to Chicago.

Kansas City Ball Park Burns.

Association park, the home of Kansas City's American association baseball team, was destroyed by fire Sunday that also burned a plant of the City Ice and Storage company and two residences, all near the park. The total loss was $100,000, of which $60,000 was sustained by the ice company and $20,000 by George Tebeau, owner of the park and of the local association team. A motor fire engine valued at $5,000 burned when the engine stopped and firemen were unable to move it.
