Trail Monuments Will Be Set.
The Oregon trail memorial commission has received notice from the county clerk of Keith county that the board of county commissioners has agreed to set the four monuments assigned to Keith county. One will be placed near Paxton, one near Ogallala, one near Brule, and one at the old California crossing. Three of these have been shipped and the one for the old California crossing will be sent out as soon as some additional lettering can be done. One monument has also been shipped to Powell.

Hit By Stray Bullet.
Lincoln.—J. Miller, a Cotner university medical student, was shot and seriously hurt while riding in an automobile near the Antelope park road Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. He narrowly escaped with his life when a ball from a 22-caliber rifle fired by a girl who was shooting by the roadside, pierced his cap and chipped a small piece of bone from his skull. Miller was driving the car at the time. He was rendered unconscious a few moments after the ball had struck him.

A. E. Sheldon, director of the Nebraska legislative reference bureau, is preparing a report on sites for historic and scenic parks in Nebraska, to be presented before the state conservation commission. Mr. Sheldon spent considerable time during the summer gathering information concerning spots in the state that would be suitable for parks. In connection with this study, Mr. Sheldon recently received a letter from Prof. A. A. Tyler of Bellevue, describing the plans for the proposed forest and park north of Bellevue.

Antonio Ayala, a messenger of the National Bank of Cuba, has been arrested by order of the special judge in charge of the investigation into the disappearance of a package containing $200,000 which was supposed to have been sent by registered mail to the National Park bank of New York on September 27.

JOHN H. MOREHEAD.

John H. Morehead, democratic candidate for governor, was born in Iowa, upon a farm. He attended district school and worked as a farm hand until he was old enough and far enough advanced to enter a business college. He worked his way through the business college, then came to Nebraska. About all he had when he crossed the Missouri river to the sundown side was health, strength and a determination to succeed honestly and fairly. He found work as a farm hand, then secured a certificate and taught country school for a year or two, and having saved up a little money engaged in the general merchandise business at Barada, Richardson county. In business he was successful, and he invested his money in land and engaged in farming and stock raising. Although now classed as a banker, Mr. Morehead gives more attention to his farm and live live stock enterprises than to banking. While engaged in business at Barada he was nominated for county treasurer by the democrats, and to everybody's surprise but his own was elected—the first democrat elected to office in that county. Two years later he was re-elected by a greatly increased majority. In 1910 he was nominated for state senator, and he again broke a record, being the first democrat ever elected to the state senate from that district. He was made president pro tem of that body and served with credit. Mr. Morehead served two terms as mayor of Falls City, and in 1908 was a delegate to the democratic national convention. He has always given his hearty support to Mr. Bryan in every campaign, and advocated the reform policies which have made Nebraska democracy famous throughout the nation. Last spring he was nominated for governor by the democracy of the state.

Mr. Morehead makes no pretense of being an orator. He is a level-headed business man who believes that it is the duty of the state's chief executive to conduct the state's affairs on strict business lines—insisting upon a dollar's worth of service for every dollar paid, and select public servants because of their ability to perform their duties instead of because of purely partisan service. He is thoroughly committed to the political reforms outlined in the democratic state platform. He was fighting for reform when some who are now so loudly protesting their progressiveness were well known as corporation tools. With other progressive men he labored successfully to give the state a workable initiative and referendum law, a board of control for the state institutions, a non-partisan judiciary—which measure was vetoed by his opponent for the office of governor—and other reforms. If Nebraska wants a chief executive who will be a Chautauque attraction instead of a business overseer, Mr. Morehead is not the man. If Nebraska wants a level-headed, successful business man to manage the state's business affairs, Mr. Morehead is the man for the position. He will be on the job all the time, giving it his best attention.

MOREHEAD LEANS TOWARD THE TOILERS.

In a letter to T. W. Parker, president of the Nebraska Federation of Labor, John H. Morehead, the democratic candidate for governor, points out that his every action as a member of the legislature pointed to keen sympathy for the rights of the wage earners.

The occasion for the letter is the determined effort by Mr. Morehead's opponents to place him in a false light before the wage earners of this state, in order, of course that this may redound to the advantage of such opposition.

Mr. Morehead's letter is as follows:

"T. W. Parker, Esq.,

"President Nebraska Federation of Labor,

Lincoln, Nebr.

"My Dear Mr. Parker:

"It has come to my notice that an effort is being made to put me in a false light with the organized workers of Nebraska. I deem it only just to both myself and the wage earners that my position upon certain questions of interest to the workers be made so plain that only those who want to be deceived will be deceived by the efforts of my opponents.

"Of course I believe in the right of wage earners to organize for their own protection and mutual assistance; indeed, I deem such organizations an absolute necessity. I know something about the benefits that have accrued to the group of toil by reason of organization, and I also realize the splendid work organized labor has done in the abolition of child labor and in making more tolerable the conditions under which men and women must work.

"I want you and your colleagues to know that if I am elected governor I will lend my best assistance to every effort that is made to further care for the interests of the men and women who work for wages. I am heartily in favor of putting Nebraska in the ranks of those progressive states that have already made provisions for the protection of workers by enacting a wise and equitable compensation law.

"Such a law should not, naturally, be drafted by the employees themselves, neither should it be drafted by employers. But such a law can and should be drafted by representatives of all factions concerned, to the end that while it does exact justice to all, it will do an injustice to none. I am in favor of a just arbitration and conciliation law, such a law as will prevent strikes without lessening in any wise the opportunities of labor to secure redress of grievances, nor permit hot-headed agitators to inflict a wrong upon employers.

"I was a member of the legislature that enacted, more laws in labor's interests than any other in the state's history. You doubtless are familiar with those laws. I favored them all. The factory inspection law needs to be supplemented by providing for factory inspection, and the same is true of other labor laws. The time has come, I believe, when the bureau of labor and industrial statistics should be better equipped, to the end that it may be made of more service to the rapidly growing army of men and women who work in Nebraska mills and shops and factories.

"While it is true that this is an agricultural state and always will be, it is a fact that Nebraska is growing as an industrial state, and the time is at hand when this fact should be recognized by appropriate legislation and adequate appropriations made for the department of state that is intended to look after the interests of employees. You may rest assured that if I am elected governor I will do all I can to bring about this condition.

"I know something about the struggles that the average man has. I started out in life for myself without a dollar, my only capital being a somewhat limited education that I secured by working my way through a business college. I worked as a farm hand, taught school and clerked in a country store. Later I engaged in business for myself and have met with a fair measure of success, but I have not forgotten my earlier struggles, nor would I if I could.

"I trust that this frank letter to you will be received in the spirit which prompted its writing. It is only fair, I take it, that you, representing a great organization of labor, should know my position directly from me, and not from those who would not hesitate to injure me by putting me in a false position.

"Very truly yours,

"JOHN H. MOREHEAD."

HANGING IS NOT THE THING.

Hanging is not what Jack Johnson needs. Imprisonment is not the punishment that should be meted out to that black brute. "I've got money and you can't get me," he asserts. "I can get any white woman I want," he impudently exclaims. No, it isn't hanging, neither is it imprisonment, that Jack Johnson deserves. It is something else. It was meted out to a white man in Falls City a few years ago. It is punishment not mentioned in polite society circles, but that fact does not deter us from alluding to it. It isn't particularly painful, but it is mighty lasting. And it strikes us as being just about the right punishment to administer to the "big smoke" who boasts that his money will protect him in his traffic in white girls, and that he can "get any white women he wants." All in favor of the suggestion will please say "Aye!"
