Republican Convention Notes.

R. E. Moore, republican candidate for senator, was formerly of the law firm of Marquette, Cobb & Moore. He is president-of the Union Savings bank. He probably takes as much interest in the business of the farmers of Lancaster as any other man in the county.

Geo. Eggleston, candidate for senator, is the president of the bank at Bennett, and a Burlington grain shipper. The banks and railroads when making their nominations, seem to think that bankers and money sharks are alone able to represent them, in which they are probably right.

It seems strange that they couldn't find an old soldier in Lancaster county worthy of a place on their legislative ticket.

The U. P. railroad demanded two members of the legislature, in response to which demand U. P. Oakley and John Gillilan were nominated. Gillilan is a chattel mortgage fiend, known all rock. over Lancaster county as "forty per cent Jack." He is a farmer, cultivating the farmer's crops after they are raised, and, as his cognomen indicates, has been taking great interest in the business. How the farmers will rally to the support of this ticket.

Did banker Eggleston sign a pledge celebration of Labor Day.

Delegate Severin, candidate for the legislature, was a delegate to the Hastings convention, and was instructed for Reese; but his vote went for Norval. He is a handy man, and satisfactory to Hathaway, Gere & Co.

The character of the county convention may readily be seen by that of the chairman of the county committee. He is Hathaway, manager of the B. & M. Journal concern. And C. H. Gere was permitted to name the congressional delegation. Mr. Republican Congressman from the first district, we want you to distinctly understand that you can't get there without the consent of the B. & M. crowd.
