

"Fanaticism Death Knell" False.

It may be somewhat surprising in these days of political burials and the defeat of prohibition that a prohibitionist shows signs of life, and still more so if he evinces a disposition to fight the battle over. Before going further I wish to depict Rosewater to the readers of this paper.

In the great contest that has been waged Rosewater, the saloon and the devil have been victorious. If this man who is not a man, but only resembles one exteriorly, had lived during the reformation he would have been a member of the Diet of Worms. In two days of Christ he would have been one of the seceders and would have spit on the face of our Savior.

Had he been a member of the twelve apostles Judas Iscariot would never have committed suicide. If he was not chained to the present state of nature and could now take up his abode in hades, the devil would resign his present position and would feel proud to be even one of his lieutenants.

Prosperous errors die hard. The realms of truth and righteousness are constantly beleaguered by the power of avarice and the enemies of advance. In the days of barbarism disputed questions of every kind were settled by the sword, to-day they are settled in the region of intellect. If the intellect is slow of comprehension, beclouded by greed and vice, reformatory measures proceed slowly.

The nearer you can make human government conformable to divine government the quicker the human race can reach a higher elevation. Law is an educator. The man that views the mountain tops of history, marking the various stages of his progress, noticing the remarkable achievements he has made in the arts, sciences, literature and every thing that has aided in his advancement and elevation cannot help inquiring into the cause.

The power of one thing that causes "the wicked to flee when no one pursueth," that controls the revolution of all bodies through space. What is it? We are forced to exclaim law!

The moral suasionist say along with other dupes of the world, that by moral suasion until in the blissful futurity the sentiment of the people will have grown sufficiently strong in opposition that the saloons will fade away into the depths of oblivion. Delusive doctrine.

Let us go back to the time when Moses was leading the children of Israel through the wilderness and notice the encampment near Mt. Sinai where happened a scene that for sublimity has had but few equals.

Moses received from the Omnipotent hand of Jehovah the decalogue, the fundamentals of law now existing, but while he was engaged in the gigantic scheme to civilize and regenerate fallen man, what do we see? Coming down from Sinai's top, bringing the commandments, he beheld the children of Israel had let the devil enter in during his absence and began idolatrous worship with his own brother Aaron the high priest's consent.

Moses was a moral suasionist for just a minute, but with backbone enough left to make an army of reforming inpositors of to-day. He threw the tables of stone to the ground smashing them in pieces, he took the golden calf, burnt it in the fire, ground it to powder and scattered it in the waters and made the Israelites drink of it and told them in unmistakable terms that the wrath of God was against them.

He was again ordered to Sinai's top and the commandments were renewed by the Divine ruler, and to-day the civilized world can stand on the grand summit of their progress, gaze upon those idolatrous fellow beings with many other barbaristic traits, asking themselves the question what has caused this? The uncontrovertible answer is law.

The principle of prohibition will live on despite the force of its present defeat, long after the last obsequies have been performed at the grave of Rosewater. Every defeat causes a few more cranks and lunatics to join the noble band.

Every defeat causes the prohibitionists to begin with renewed zeal. I have faith in the intelligence of the farmers of Nebraska as well as the rest of its citizens to think that they will not let a business proceed long that thrives upon the degradation of their fellow-men.

Let us consider the great reform thoroughly and the next time it is submitted to our votes, vote in such a way that our posterity can read in the graves-stones of "life a failure," but in the place of this let the grandest of all epitaphs be written. "They went about doing good." E. F. BRYANT. Weston, Neb., Nov. 17, 1890.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

CENTRAL CITY, NEB. MR. EDITOR:—The battle has been fought and a great victory won, and the independent party may feel proud of its work. No party in any country can boast of such a success in a three months' campaign. We went into the fight with no weapon save the sword of Justice, and we fought an aggressive battle from the start.

The enemy used every means in their power to stem the tide. No lie was too mean to tell, no name too clean for their mud batteries to try to taint. The farmers were classed no better than animals. But the laboring men of this year did not believe all the job-hunters told them, and voted for our side, and now we have a chance to redeem the state from the grasp of the money power. The people are awake and Congress must do something at once for the farmers and laboring men or we will see a farmer in the president's chair two years hence. We can look over the last session of congress and during the entire ten months no law was passed that materially benefited the farmer of the west. As a result of the waste of time and money, we see the dominant party defeated so badly that it will be almost impossible for it to remain a party organization.

Congress must compel the U. P. and C. P. railroads to pay their just debts. The farmers and laboring men won't keep any party in power that will favor class legislation and uphold such a glaring injustice as has been done to the people of the country by congress permitting the railroads to not even pay the interest on their debts and forcing the poor man to pay his debts even if he loses his home. We must have a stringent usury law. We must have an equalization of taxes. The property assessed must be put at its real value and not as now, left to the assessor to value it at one-half to one-tenth of its cash value.

Banks must be assessed the same as real estate. A banker who publishes a card to catch those on which he puts his resources at $100,000 must be taxed that amount. The farmer is taxed that way and the banker is allowed to give in his assessment at just his cash on hand. If the banker is permitted to deduct his liabilities from his capital, then the farmer should do the same. The farmer's eyes are opened and we are confident that he will claim and get his rights from the next legislature.

Brother farmers and laborers, don't go to sleep now, for the good work has just begun. Keep up an interest in the Alliance; meet often and consult with your neighbors and send requests to your legislators stating in respectful terms what you need. Subscribe for your Alliance paper even if you drop all other papers. It is the only paper in the state that gave you a fair show. The press of the state, with but very few exceptions has slandered you and sneered at you, ridiculed you in every manner possible, and you are not men if you do not resent the insults. It is not boycotting to stop taking a paper that has abused you and your friends. "Help your friends and help yourselves" is a good maxim. Let us build up a good paper in the state in the interest of the laborer. We don't want a subsidized paper. We want one that will feel our pulse and tell us our ailments and prescribe for our wants. Don't forget the Alliance; keep them up, and weed out dead beats and fill their places with new men. Shake hands over our great victory. Fraternally, M. M. HALLECK.

Chronicles of the Tribes of Heads and Heels. And it came to pass in the country lying to the westward and bordering upon to the great and mighty river and stretching forth unto the mountains thereof, that there dwelt a people who were known as the tribe of "Heads," of whom it has heretofore been written.

Now this was possessed of great power, for a part of this people had wealth and bode in abundance. But many of them were laborers and tillers of the soil and peradventure they were poor, for the chief rulers imposed great burdens upon them, and spake unto one another saying, "Verily, verily, we say it is meet that they should toil, but we are their superiors, and it is naught but right that we reap the benefit and obtain the fruits of their labor."

And when we desire a re-election we will have great respect for them, and we shall condescend to shake them by the hand and fatten them on promises, and they will open their mouths and say unto us, "Let us have a word with you, for they are not wise like us, and we can deceive and betray them like unto Judas, for they know not what they do, and we care not, so long as they are the rulers." And the chief rulers said, "In this manner did they reason one with another. And when the laborers and tillers of the soil petitioned unto them for relief they were laughed to scorn, and told that they would do aught in their power for the poor Hayesites, but while their pretensions were great their intentions were small, for they continued their oppression for many years, and the people began to murmur. But the chief rulers needed them not until the laborers and tillers of the soil spake one unto another saying, "Let us gather ourselves together at the tabernacle in the capital city of the land and select from among us men whom we desire to be our rulers," and they all cried out with one accord, "Even so be it!"

And they chose accordingly, and when the tribe of Heads heard of these things the felt sore at heart, and they became wrathful and spake unto the Hayesites saying, "Get ye hence; ye are naught but swine, and your filth and stench should not pollute our parlors and high places, lest it require many months to purify the same." But the Hayesites replied, "Come down from your exalted throne, for ye shall henceforth, now and forevermore be known as the extinct tribe of Heels, while we shall be sur-named the tribe of Heads." And on the fourth day of the eleventh month of the nineteenth year these things came to pass as foretold, and the chief rulers of the tribe of Heels felt sore at heart and were grieved beyond measure; for they rent their clothes and went forth and sat down upon the corners of chips and wept loud and bitterly, and the tears rolled down their cheeks even to the size of black walnuts. Thus ended the sayings and doings of the tribe of Heels.

The above epistle is recorded in the last half of the fifty-eighth chapter of Chronicles, by Suter from the land of the Nephilites.

MARKS BROS. SADDLERY COMPANY. CERESCO, NEB., Oct. 31, 1890. Richard Alliance No. 725 To whom it may concern: Having a copy of the contract as presented by Marks Bros. Saddlery Co., of Omaha, to their employees (Saddle and Harness Makers' Union No. 19), have July read and carefully noted the same, and we as an organized body do pronounce said contract as partial and unjust, and an insult to every honest person; therefore, be it Resolved, That we as consumers of harness, etc., refuse to buy any of Marks Bros. goods until they are willing to grant the same privileges as they request. Furthermore, be it Resolved, That we send a copy of these resolutions with said contract to our county and state papers to inform the public of our resentment and to extend to our brother workmen and consumers of our products our heartfelt sympathy during this lockout and shall willingly stand by them until equality and justice prevail.

THE BATTLE OVER. A Cheerful Letter from Bro. McCall. ORD, NEBRASKA, Nov. 10, 1890. EDITOR FARMERS' ALLIANCE—Dear Sir: The battle is over and many victories won. I am truly sorry for the valiant knights who have borne the people's standards to the forefront and have not received sufficient support to cause victory to perch on their banners. Some of the people for whom such a valiant struggle was made, seemed to entertain views similar to the negro during the late war. When told that the war was waged in his interest and that he should "to arms" for his own liberty, replied, "Did you ever see two dogs fight over a bone?" "Yes, "Did you ever see the bone fight?" So with some who claim that they as wealth-producers, feel the "heel of the oppressor." But a party FOUR MONTHS old does not understand.

Every nominee of the state convention was a valiant advocate of the people's cause. Every congressional nominee who entered the race had the attributes of a winner, and Thornton, who managed the canvass in the "Big Third," is a general worthy any command. But I cannot name all the true and tried, the heroic and skillful—their names are legion. There is a matter close to my heart at this writing and that is the success and perpetuity of that newspaper THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE. Its life and generous support is a matter of great moment. My time is not out but I hereby renew for another year. I shall advise all friends to take this NOBLE and ABLE exponent of the rights and needs of the farmers of Nebraska. The editor may have made mistakes. I do not know. Of one thing I am assured—he has had great foresight and has been true and fearless. In saying this I do not take up any person's warfare of his. I condemn no man except upon evidence.

Had the editor scored me severely and done it with prudence and in sincerity I would try to forgive him, but if I could not I would not try to block the wheels of progress just to punish one man. Let there be no falling out of ranks. Let all lovers of humanity rally to the bugle call and march with freedom upon strongholds of oppression. Let us recruit subscribers for THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE by dozens and scores and make it a glad and secure rest and support our own policy in press. Let us not delay. Now is the time. We may delay too long. It seems strange that the farmers will engage in a life and death struggle and then listen to the captives in command of the enemy instead of their own.

Gather no forage for the enemy, but find subsistence for your own valiant heroes in the forefront. Our home newspapers must not be forgotten either. Thine for industrial emancipation. D. McCALL. Congratulations from Sherman County. DIVIDE, NEB., Nov. 11, 1890. EDITOR ALLIANCE—Sherman county has redeemed herself from corrupt party rule. The sovereign people have asserted their independence, and the first important step has been taken towards reform. Your able journal has been one of the prime factors in this result. As an educator of the people in regard to their duties and privileges it has been a grand success. May its usefulness and efficiency continue until our common country is delivered from its present system of government, and its ruins rises an administration worthy of the American people.

Inclosed find renewed subscription to THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE, and believe me very truly and Fraternally Yours, C. H. KINE.

If Mr. Thomas P. Grady of the Baltimore Manufacturers' Record is to be believed, Speaker Reed has not even the excuse of fanaticism for his attempt to pass the force bill. Mr. Grady says that Mr. W. P. Rice, a Boston man having large investments in the south, but an ardent republican, called on Reed during the time the bill was pending. "The speaker has forgotten that Mr. Rice had a large pecuniary interests in the south, and declared to him that something must be done to stop the exodus of capital from New England to the south, and the speaker said that Mr. Rice would stir up trouble that would accomplish this result. This is a remarkable story, but there is nothing in Mr. Reed's career to make it improbable. If it is true, he is as basely sold as a dog can be found in any state penitentiary."—X. Y. Standard.
