Love's Secret.

Love found them sitting in a woodland place. His amorous hand amid her golden tresses; And low, looked smiling on her glowing face. And moistened eyes, upturned to his caresses.

"O sweet!" she murmured, "life is niter bliss." "Dear heart," he said, "our golden cup runs over."

"Drink, love!" she cried, "and thank the gods for this." He drained the precious lips of cup and lover.

Love blessed the kiss, but ere he wandered thence. The maid blossomed with this benediction: "Love lies within the brimming bowl of sense; Who keeps this full has joy—who drains, affliction."

They heard the rattle as he smiling fled; She reached her hand to pull the roses blow- ing;

He stooped to take the purple grapes o'er- head; Love whispered back: "Nay, keep their beauties growing."

They paused and understood; one flew alone; They took and kept, and Love was smiling over.

The roses bloomed, their cup went brim- ming o'er; She looked for Love within, and found her lover.

The American Orders of Nobility.

The Grand Army of the Republic is a unique organization. In the words of a Past Commander-in-Chief: "No child can be born into it; no proclamation of President, edict of King, or ukase of Czar can constitute a member, no university or institution of learning can issue a diploma authorizing its holder to entrance; no act of Congress or Parliament recognitions; the wealth of a Vanderbilt cannot purchase the position; its doors swing open only upon presentation of the bit of paper, torn, worn, begrimed it may be, which certifies to an honorable discharge from armies or navies of the Nation during the war against rebellion." And unlike any other association, no "new blood" can come in; there are no growing ranks for recruits can be drawn into the Grand Army of the Republic. With the consummation of peace through victory, its rolls were closed forever. Its lines are steadily and swiftly growing thicker, and the ceaseless tramp of its columns is with ever-renewing tread; the rays in the picketed line grow wider; day by day details are made from the reserve, summoned into the shadowy regions to return to touch elbows no more; until by-and-by, only a solitary sentinel shall stand guard waiting till the bugle call from beyond shall summon out on the last convulse of the Grand Army of the Republic.—George S. Meritt, in the New England Magazine.

Cattle Killed by Elks.

A ranchman living on the Satsop, Col., missed three of his cattle, and a congregation of buzzards accompanied a party of men to make a search and found all three of the men lying dead, their bones scattered about, their horns knocked off, and their hair left on their heads, and around them to form up tracks. Apparently a band of buzzards came up and attacked them in the evening, hooked and batted them about, and pawed and stamped them
