ENGLISH WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The Periods at Which They Were Regulated and Defined by Law.

The jewelers of the middle ages used in their delicate scales the havi, brown seeds of the Moorish carob tree (ceratonia siliqua), and the weight of diamonds is still reckoned by carats, each carat being equal to 3 1-6 grains troy.

In 1324 the measures of length were defined by a similar statute providing that three barleycorns round and dry, laid end to end, shall make 1 inch, 12 inches a foot, and 3 feet a yard.

The 32 wheat corns, adopted as the basis of the British system, appear to have weighed 72 1-2 grains troy, so that the pound of 1265 was equal to 5,400 grains troy. This is the old Saxon pound. The pound troy (pound du roy) is the Roman pound, and was doubtless in use simultaneously with the Saxon pound for hundreds of years.

The strict pound of 12 ounces was used only in weighing the precious metals and, with different subdivisions, for the costly drugs and medicines dealt out by apothecaries.

Here is a very neat little story illustrative of the fact that even the wild woolly West can produce a natural-born Chesterfield upon occasion.

Gen. Hardee, the famous tactician and Confederate commander, was a strict disciplinarian. One day, while commanding in the southwest, he rode out on picket line, and, much to his surprise, found a sentry, a raw recruit, sitting on a rail fence munching a piece of bacon.

It is expected that the number of bodies cremated in Milan will soon average one a day, as nearly two thousand bodies have been cremated there during the last thirteen years.
