

The Happy Living. O, they the sun behold— His setting, ruby-crowned. His dawn-robe's cloth of gold. They sleep not 'neath the ground.

HAD SEEN UGLIER MEN. Mr. Harman predicted that Lincoln would be nominated.

In December, 1859, Mr. John W. Harman, who was then, as now, a merchant of New York, was in Springfield, Ill., where he had legal business with his attorney, Maj. Stuart, Abraham Lincoln's relative and friend.

Mr. Harman turned to Stuart and said, with the emphasis of a deep conviction: "Major, the next president of the United States is a resident of your city."

Lincoln arose and extended his hand. "I must beg your pardon for the intrusion," said the caller, "as I have no business here, and came only through curiosity. I have been told that you were the homeliest man in Illinois, and I came to see for myself."

"Well, well," said Lincoln, with a laugh, "do you find the declaration verified?"

"I've seen uglier men," Mr. Harman replied, "but I must confess that I would never pick you out for a handsome man." Then he added: "But what I came in for, Mr. Lincoln, was to tell you that the national Republican convention of next year will most certainly nominate you as its candidate for president of the United States."

Mr. Lincoln's whole appearance showed that he was deeply moved. His voice trembled and all he could say was: "Do you think so? Do you really think so?"

In July, 1860, business once more carried Mr. Harman to Springfield. Meanwhile the second national Republican convention had met at Chicago and performed its work. Soon after Mr. Harman went over to the old state house, transformed into a court house, where Lincoln sat upon a horsehair sofa in conversation with a friend.

He saw Mr. Harman when a hundred feet away, and jumping up, ran over to him, grasped him by both hands, which he shook vigorously, and said: "My friend, I remember you like a book! You are the man who predicted my nomination and election."

A popular western novelist remarked the other day, says the Atlanta Constitution, that sometimes a fool gets talked about so much that the other fools think he is a great man.

There is a mistake in this view. But it is a mistake to limit the proposition to fools. It is of very general application, and hits sensible persons as well as others.

Some years ago a busy journalist said to a friend: "I am done with what you call work for the remainder of my life." "How will you live?" he asked. "By advertising myself," was the calm reply.

And the audacious newspaper man was as good as his word. He sauntered about and the papers began to print little paragraphs about his brilliant gifts and his phenomenal capacity to do anything and everything. People talked about the man, hunted him up and offered him money-making opportunities.

Indian luxury.

Despite their subjugation to British rule the princes of India are still able to indulge in royal whites and extravagances. One of them recently had made at Paris a bed worth $25,000. His canopy is supported by four automatic female figures that wave fans to cool the air. The mattress is a huge musical box, which, when one lies upon it, plays operatic airs.
