CURRENT MISCELLANY FROM WOMAN'S SPHERE.

The Entrancing Woman of Today—How Women Shake Hands—Queen Victoria and Her Chef—Neatness in Young Girls—Feminine Gossip.

Morning.

Will there really be a morning?
Is there such a thing as day?
Could I see it from the mountains
If I were as tall as they?

Has it feet like water-lillies?
Has it feathers like a bird?
Is it brought from famous countries
Of which I have never heard?

Oh, some scholar! Oh, some sailor!
Oh, some wise man from the skies!
Please to tell a little pilgrim
Where the place called morning lies!
—Emily Dickinson.

The Entrancing Woman.

One needs only a slight experience in general society to discover that taste has separate necessities in different individuals, and that beauty, wit, "style," a gift for light conversation, depth of mind, have each their admirers, a fact that sets the ones on the outside of the special circumstance to wondering what there can possibly be in the particular woman to "draw."

Is there a woman who is universally entrancing? Is there one who commands worship swift and entire—a worship impatient of reasoning, that submits to no authority but that of insight?

If there is, we must naturally conclude that she possesses something that appeals to more than one side of human nature, and this does not mean that she has that diplomacy that in the beginning is perhaps nothing more than the desire to please the many, but which often degenerates into positive insincerity, but rather that unconscious touch upon her kind that comes from a very necessity of her being.

Sorrow and joy are at the extremes of human experience, and the woman who stands at the centre stretching sympathetic hands toward either condition must be the one who is essentially charming. Like Tennyson's "Rare pale Margaret," she stands between the rainbow and the sun."

This woman of the sweet confiding nature, who is thrilled with the delights of life, upon whom is flashed all the beauty and grace in nature, and yet who bears about her evidences that the storms have raged at the very centre of her soul, and that she has taken the hand of many a sufferer, to descend in sympathy to the deepest grave of affliction, is an enchantress. She is the one to whom the young come with their enthusiasms and youthful fears and hopes; indeed, so perennial are the springs of renewal within her nature that in the passage of the years time seems to have refused to make its sign upon her, and yet the middle aged and the old recognize in her a friend and helper.

To her the knightliness of the manliest manhood bows and offers protection. Perhaps all men naturally are susceptible to appeals to the strength of their arm and to their bravery of soul, and this something in a woman's eyes half revealed, this touch of sadness, few of the stronger sex are able to resist.

Such a woman is beyond the art of the copyist. Spend their efforts as they may in trying to reproduce the fascinating effects, women who envy her are never able to get a true copy. Sometimes they imagine that the secret may be found in a tone of the voice, or, again, in a glance of the eye, or in the pose of the figure; but in the effort to adapt these to their own personality, they meet failure even before the first trial of their experiment is made in public.

But the entrancing woman pays her price, in a sense, for her power. The rainbow that is hung in beauty in the sight of the many to delight, cheer, and inspire them, was formed through the mist of her tears, and when the glorious colors fade away, some turn to behold the lonely figure that stands amid the clearing mists.—Mary E. Baldwin.

How Women Shake Hands.

Did you ever study the handshakes of women? If you have you must have observed that they vary even as the female temper varies. Three styles, however, are conspicuous by their dissimilarity and by the emotions which they indicate.

Behold the ardent beauty, with extended arms, seeming to say: "Give me your heart, here is mine, but really meaning, "Why, my dear Miss ——, I'm so glad you've come, you sweet soul." (A kiss usually clinches the utterances.)

Now the same pair of hands held out to one of the sterner sex may mean (so the sterner sex is conceited enough to interpret it), "Dear George, I've been dying (she never looked better) to see you. Where have you kept yourself?"

Next behold ye prude, ye maiden with eyes a-staring at her caller's bonnet. This's not her arms are paralyzed, if one of them seems glued to the bottom of her basque and the other is best like a chicken's leg in cold weather. Nay, she is only a cold Diana, and even while she gives callers only the tips of those fingers she is afraid that she may become affected by the temperature of cordiality.

"A shrine like hers would freeze a suitor, chill Mr. ——, who only waits for fortunate and paralyzes "a puny relation." She simply says when (as ushered, "Good a." (rising inflection and very loud). If receiving she will say,

"Pleased to see you, is your mother girls," who does not say "Shake!" but thinks it. That hand which readily grasps yours has been educated at the pump handle, and its grip forces some of the deepest emotions from your heart to your lips. The nature of the emotions will largely depend (if you are a man) on how you regard the mannish costume. If you are a woman—well, it is impossible to tell how a woman may or may not act. She cries when she is expectected to laugh, and laughs when she is expected to cry.—Boston Globe.

Neatness in Girls.

Neatness is a good thing for a girl, and if she does not learn it when she is young, she never will. It takes a great deal more neatness to make a girl look well than it does to make a boy look passable. Not because a boy, to start with, is better looking than a girl, but his clothes are of a different sort, not so many colors in them; and people don't expect a boy to look so pretty as a girl. A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a sloven, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty, and her eyes bright, but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek, and her fingers' ends are black with ink, and her shoes are not laced or buttoned up, and her apron is dirty, and her collar is not buttoned, and her skirt is torn, she can not be liked. Learn to be neat, and when you have learned it, it will almost take care of itself.—Christian at Work.

How to Lay a Carpet.

Lay the linings on the floor, putting a small tack here and there to keep them in place. Put the carpet on the floor, unrolling it in the direction in which it is to be laid. Begin to tack it at the end of the room which is the most irregular. If there be a fire-place or bay-window in the room, fit the carpet around these places first. Use large tacks to hold the carpet temporarily in place; they can be withdrawn when the work is finished. When the carpet is fitted to a place, use small tacks to keep it down. Tack one end of the carpet, stretching it well; then a side, then the other end, and finally the other side. Be careful to keep the lines straight and to have the carpet fit tightly; for if it be loose it will not only look badly, but will not wear well.—Maria Parloa, in The Ladies' Home Journal.

Kate Fields Falling.

There are few men and circumstances that self-reliant Miss Kate Field does not feel quite able to cope with and eventually master. Lately, at a large public dinner, she occupied a seat in the ladies' gallery, and listened with flattering attention to the post-prandial speeches. A favorite orator at length arose, and drifted into such extended and uninteresting expressions of hopes, interlarded with reminiscenses, that his audience grew politely restive. "I fear he imagines himself again in the Senate Chamber, where one can step out during dull speeches," remarked Miss Field, in a calm, loud voice, from her gallery corner, and in one moment a more nervous and pithy talker had taken the floor.

Feminine Flashes.

Barbara Allen gowns is the name a clever dressmaker has given to a creation of her own, that is no more nor less than the long-tailed basque, made to be worn with a plain skirt. This basque has the full, all-around coat-tails but is exaggeratedly short in the waist, and from the low-cut throat and leg-o'-mutton sleeve wrists turn back deep-pointed lace cuffs.

Mrs. Henry W. Grady, widow of the famous Southern editor, makes occasional visits to New York, where she is the recipient of innumerable and graceful hospitalities extended by members of the large Southern colony in the Northern city. Dinners, luncheons, breakfasts, flowers, drives, and uncountable callers are among the compliments and hospitalities showered upon the widow.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis, who for so long a time has lain ill and helpless at a New York hotel, is another Southern woman never forgotten by her countrymen and women in the big city. Her daughter, Winnie, is always her devoted nurse and companion, and for her mother's sake has almost entirely retired from the world, its amusements and pleasant temptations hold out to her by friends and admirers.

To the home of an eccentric and cultivated Spanish couple recently came an eighth small son, whose sex was a bitter disappointment to the mother for more than one reason. She wished a daughter, and she also found that the distribution of suitable names among her seven other blooming sons had exhausted her supply of euphonious masculine appelations. In the hurry and excitement of baptism, Maria Mercedes were the best names his parents could contrive for him.

Mrs. Helen Campbell, whose literary and philanthropic labors have won her many admirers and great fame, lives during the winter in a charmingly decorated New York apartment, and in the summer moves to her pretty cottage at Orange, N. J. In her two homes she feels great pride, for by her own perseverance and endeavor did she win them.

A skillful sewing-woman, engaged by the recently organized Sewing League of New York to finish up certain bits of work left by absent members, discovered, rather to her astonishment, that among the fashionable and wealthy women who composed this particular chapter of the league not one, but could use her needle with neatness, rapidity, and good taste.

An Elephant Presented to the Government.

The National Zoological Garden in Washington is still in its infancy. Its interest and attractiveness have been largely increased by the generous gift of Mr. James E. Cooper, the owner of the Adam Forepaugh shows. It is not every man, not even the rich potentates of the East, who can give away Elephants. It has remained for Mr. Cooper to present to the government a splendid specimen of the Asiatic elephant. The animal is known by the name of Dunk, is about twenty-five years of age, weighs nearly four tons, and is over eight feet in height. The presentation took place on the afternoon of April 20, and was made in the large menagerie canvas in the presence of several noted public officials and members of the press.

Mr. James E. Cooper, in delivering the elephant, stated that he trusted the gift would prove a stimulous in inducing congress to give needed aid to what should be a most useful institution for the instruction of public students and scientists. He spoke of the benefits which zoological gardens abroad afforded to artists and those studying comparative anatomy.

Dr. Frank Baker, the superintendent of the park, expressed the thanks of the government for the magnificent gift, and said it was of such a character as to be a most valuable addition to the park. He handed to Mr. Cooper a letter from Prof. S. P. Langley, of the Smithsonian Institute, in which the thanks of the regents was warmly expressed. Dunk was then escorted to his new home. Upon one side marched his neighbor, Brazil, while Gold Dust was chained to the other. On reaching the park his old keeper bade him good-bye. Manager J. T. McCadden, as soon as he saw that the national elephant was showing lonesomeness, ordered that Gold Dust be allowed to remain and keep him company for a few weeks.

Mr. Cooper is to-day the oldest showman in active business. He is a native of, and resides in, Philadelphia. For thirty-five years he has been a proprietor of circusses, and many of the improvements in this particular sphere of amusement world have been due to his energy. In presenting such a valuable gift at this time he has fairly earned the reputation as a public benefactor. If other men who have it in their power to do so will promptly follow his example it will not be long before the National Zoological Garden will become worthy of the government and the country.—Leslies Ills. THE MONEY MONOPOLY!

Scarce and dear money (hard money) making cheap labor, wage slavery, falling prices, business paralysis and enforced idleness, doubling the Volume and Value of money obligations (bonds and mortgages) creating a land lord system.

A Treatise on Money and Finance
BY
E. R. BAKER,
SIDNEY, - - - - IOWA.

112 Large Closely printed pages, Large type on fine book paper.

"We heartily reccomend the 'Money Monopoly' to all who would form a definite understanding of the XV financial plank of our Order, as it is without exception the best exposition of that plank it has been our good fortune to see. Wonderfully clear and forcible—invaluable on the platform and in the assembly room. 'The Money Monopoly is a book which no labor reformer should be without."—Journal of K. of L. Phila., Pa., Jan. 29.

Col. Jesse Harper, the old war horse of the greenback movement speaks as follows of this: "I have read with great care the 'Money Monopoly,' used it all through the last campaign and can say that for practical use it is the best book now in print.

The general treatment of the monopoly struggle now going on is masterly, and the special support of the outline by extracts from hundreds of volumes from the best men of the ages on the three great questions of Money, Transportation and Land, (so full and exact as to give the full force of the authorities,) is a unique way of putting the argument, but plain forcible and interesting in so full a measure as to give the book reading qualities most pleasing. To the public speaker and writer it is a cyclopedia almost priceless. Its accuracy is wonderful. It is healthy; no alarmist craze, but appeals to the judgment and the conscience.

It is a grand argument for a higher civilization, a purer Christianity. If it was read by the people of fair, honest minds, it would work a revolution of thought that would be astounding.

God speed it! and give proper reward to the mind that formed it and the hand that penned it." J. Harper.

"A most wieldy club in the hands of the masses, send me 10 copies."—C. W. Trice, M. D. Tecumseh, Neb.

"Send me 50 more copies with which to scourge the toads of monopoly."
G. H. Harvey, News Agt., Duncan, Ill.
