

Talks on Nationalism. By Edward Bellamy in The New Nation. Mr. Smith has joined the Nationalists...

Smith—How is the investment business nowadays? Investment Banker—As bad as possible. I've been in it thirty years...

I. B.—There are some which everybody knows also that the railroad business in this country is in a condition of corruption and chaos...

I. B.—General cussedness; a hopeless complication of bad morals and crazy economies. Smith—Do you think that the decline in railroad securities is pretty near at an end?

I. B.—By no means! The end isn't in sight. The decline will not touch bottom till every water dollar has been squeezed out of the goods...

Smith—I should think that, as a government ownership man, you would find yourself rather lonesome among the financiers.

I. B.—Don't suppose any such thing. No honest banker or broker has any desire to deal in securities which, like those of our railroads at present, are nothing but the marked cards of professional gamblers...

Smith—Does not the same argument apply generally in favor of national and municipal purchase of telegraph lines, express companies, street-lighting plants and street railroad systems?

I. B.—Certainly! The same argument applies to all these classes of investments. I never recommend a customer to invest in telegraph, street car or any of those lines of securities without finding out whether they are over-capitalized...

Smith—What do you say about the stock of the big manufacturing trusts, the "industrial," as investments? I. B.—The operations of the sugar trust have given a black eye to that sort of security...

Smith—I observe, of late, that the craze for stock and industrial and commercial businesses is spreading at such a rate among the smaller concerns...

I. B.—Yes; and it is a mighty unhealthy sign, too. Some of these investments are doubtless sound, but in many cases I judge they are speculative...

Smith—But what do you let your customers invest in? Supporting a man, through no fault of his own, has a little money, what are you going to let him do with it, pending the arrival of the good time coming?

I. B.—I have no objection to that. It is certainly safer than any of the investments have been mentioned. But my chief line is public bonds and municipal securities...

Smith—So far as I understand you, then, there is nothing in the programme of nationalism that need cause any panic among financiers.

I. B.—Nothing at all, I assure you. The advent of nationalism means, indeed, a judgment day sooner or later for all false values and fraudulently inflated enterprises...

LINCOLN'S LIFE DRAMATIZED. Incidents of His Life Taken From The Files of The Herald and Made Into a Play.

Messrs. McKee Rankin and Archie Gordin, looking around for a subject for a play a few months ago, hit upon the idea of gathering together the sensational incidents of Abraham Lincoln's life and dramatizing them.

The play is now finished and arrangements have already been made for its presentation in the West early in the fall. The action of the play opens January 1, 1863, and closes with the death of John Wilkes Booth after he had assassinated the President.

Speaking about the play the other day Mr. Gordon said that the incidents in Lincoln's life which were used were furnished by Arnold's "History of Lincoln," Mr. John Hay's book, and most of all from the files of the Herald.

An effort is made in the play to show Lincoln in his duality as President of the United States and the head of the White House family.

The play is in five acts, the first ending with the signing of the document of emancipation, the second with the conspiracy of John Wilkes Booth to assassinate the President...

The principal scene will be the assassination, and this will be worked as realistically as possible. There are twenty-seven speaking characters in all in the play, and it is proposed to have a force of supernumeraries of over two hundred.

DRIVING IN LONDON. They Have Some Roles Which Are Found Nowhere Else.

England is the only place I know of where they drive to the left. English drivers say that by sitting on the right and driving to the left they can better watch the hubs of approaching vehicles...

Quick going vehicles will turn a corner sharply, but the driver raises his whip to notify the vehicle in his immediate rear that he is about to turn.

"Cabbies" are more considerate concerning fellow-drivers than they are thoughtful about the lives and limbs of pedestrians. All their attention is given to the roadway.

Pedestrians must look out for themselves or be run over. That is why so many of the London police are engaged solely in attempting to street traffic.

Jane as borne by the royal families of Europe has always been a name of ill-omen. Lady Jane Grey was beheaded for treason; Jane Seymour was one of the victims of King Hal; Jane Beaufort, wife of James I. of Scotland was savagely murdered.
