

A SHARP TRICK.

But it Didn't Work on One Man Who Knew About It.

When the guests sat down to the table in the little combination hotel and boarding-house the proprietor uncovered what looked like a fine roast of beef, and cut off a fairly liberal slice for each man.

The surveyor who had been tramping around all day said he was as hungry as a bear, and thought he could eat at least half of such a roast, and the other members of the party admitted that they could make large sections of it disappear.

The proprietor said he trusted they would not stint themselves, he liked to see his guests have good appetites. He rather prided himself on the table he set, he said.

"Gentlemen," he said, "do you notice anything wrong with this beef?" "What seems to be the matter?" asked the surveyor, as he poised a piece of it on his fork.

"Why, I may be a little over-fatigued because of the superfluous quantity of our beef usually," said the proprietor, "but it tastes to me a trifle tainted."

The surveyor tried the piece he had on his fork and admitted that it did taste a trifle strong, and the man next to him had noticed it also.

"I'll see about it," said the landlord with determination, and he had the cook called in. The cook said the meat had been delivered that morning, but that it looked a little stale to him.

"That settles it," said the proprietor, with determination. "Gentlemen, I'm sorry, but we'll have to do the best we can with vegetables. Tomorrow is Sunday, however, and I'll have the finest roast in the country for you."

"Hold on!" expostulated the commercial traveler. "Give me another piece first."

"You don't mean to say you like it?" exclaimed all the others. "Oh, it's not so bad," he replied. They washed him eat it, and they waited for him to get sick; but he didn't get sick; on the contrary, he seemed to feel better than any of them.

"Not at all," he replied, "but I've been here before. It's his regular trick to make the roast last over Sunday."—Chicago Tribune.

THEY LOVE THE WEED. Royal Women Who Smoke Cigarettes With Gusto.

Those who rave with unceasing bitterness against women who smoke, and who declare the habit to be ill-bred and fast, have no idea of the women they are condemning.

The Empress of Russia and Austria, the Queen of Italy and the Queen Regent of Spain, as well as their Majesties of Portugal, Roumania and Serbia, and the Countries of Paris are all ardent lovers of tobacco, of which they are also thoroughly good judges.

Perhaps the most inveterate smoker among the Royal ladies is the Empress of Austria, who consumes from thirty to forty cigarettes a day. She keeps her tobacco in an exquisitely-classed silver box, which, together with a gold ash tray, are always to be seen on her writing table.

It is fitted up in the style of one of the loveliest rooms at the Alhambra, palm trees giving it quite a tropical appearance, while tempting lounges invite that repose which is such a delightful adjunct to the fragrant weed.

Substitute for Black Walnut. Black walnut, formerly so extensively used in the manufacture of furniture, is said to be growing exceedingly scarce in Florida.

A Useful Accomplishment. Father—"Johnny, there's a button off your coat. Go up stairs and sew it on."

Little Johnny (in surprise)—"Mother will sew it on." Father—"I know she will, but I want you to learn to sew on buttons yourself."

"A Powerful Story." GREAT SPECIAL SALE OF CLOAKS FITZGERALD DRY GOODS CO., 1036 O STREET, LINCOLN.

That Is What All Who Have Seen Advance Copies Call HER FATHER'S VICTIM, A Thrilling Tale of Western Life, THOMAS P. MONTFORT.

The story outlines in a vivid manner the hardships of Western pioneer life, and describes in detail the sufferings—physical and mental—endured by settlers who, by unfortunate circumstances, are compelled to seek assistance from professional money-lenders; the sad pictures being relieved by a well-told and romantic love tale.

Every important detail of the story is based on facts which came under the personal observation of the author, while living in Western and Central Kansas.
