Every Time He Visits Town He Is Pulled In, Until the Thing Gets to Be Monot onous-Diaguises Are of No Avail and the Case Is Apparently Hopeless. [Copyright, 1802, by Charles B. Lewis ! If I should visit detective headquarters in the city hall in Philadelphia tomorrow I know exactly what sort of a greeting I'd receive. The boys would all jump from their chairs and yell out:

"A-h-h-h! The old man Bender come to Then I'd be taken down, locked up for half a day and finally released with a great deal of growling because they couldn't prove it on me.

I used to go to Philadelphia several times a year to collect some money for an orphan. She was a real nice orphan, but I had to pass the business over to other hands. They got so they arrested me every time I showed up, and their eternal vigilance finally made me tired.

On the occasion of my first arrest I had landed in Camden. As I boarded the ferryboat I noticed a stranger eying me attentively, and then consulting a printed postal card. By the time the boat landed at the foot of Market street he was satisfied, and he approached me and said: "Ne nonsense now, Mr. Whitel I want you to go up to headquarters!" I went with him. He was tickled all over. He was sure he had a Pennsylvania embezzler, for whom a reward of $250 was offered. I didn't want to dash his hopes, and so didn't say anything until taken be-fore the chief of police. That was six hours after my arrest, as he was out of town. I spent the interval in a call, and the cow thief in the adjoining box kindly advised me to keep my mouth shut and do no squealing. They had to turn me loose. They did it grudgingly and with a hint that I ought to be held for a week as a A month later, as I entered the city by railroad, and just as I was leaving the big depot, a gentleman linked his arm in mine in an affectionate way and said: "Now, then, step right over with me to see the chief! I've been looking for you for a long time!" "Haven't made any mistake about it. have you?" I asked.

"Not if the court knows herself! We are on to your little game, and I've been expecting you for the last fortnight!"
There isn't any use in kicking and being disagreeable when a man has been expecting you as long as that.

I tried to be cheerful as we walked along. I even joked with him, but he was no joker. He said I might tickle a county constable with some of my old chestnuts, but it was useless to try them on him. When we got to headquarters the chief was out. It was his duty to be out, I suppose. The statesman who arrested me stood me up at the desk and searched me. He seemed cast down because I didn't pan out more, and when I tried to explain that shut up. As no forged checks or burglar tools or stolen bonds were found in my possession, I naturally supposed that I would be told to depart in peace. I was mistaken, however. I was "taken down" and locked up to await something or somebody. In the cell next to me was a gallon, and that's proof enough of the gentleman named the St. Joe Kid. He had gallon, and that's proof enough of the profits. Only one saloon has failed during profits. was no kid, but he was not captious. He bade me be of good cheer and keep mum. He said a chap who kept mum could hardly ever be convicted of anything, especially if he had fifty dollars to pay a lawyer.

In due time, which means 5 o'clock p. m. in Philadelphia, I was taken before the chief. He was very frank with me. While admitting that I was not the confidence man he was looking for, and was therefore discharged from custody, he advised me not to come to town any oftener than was positively necessary, and to be prepared for trouble at any moment.

My third arrest was due to my own carea red wig and a Spanish cloak, I went walking up Chestnut street in broad daylight. Pretty soon a strange gentleman joined me in my travels. A still, small voice whispered to me that he was a detective, and that I was run to earth at last.

'Will you come quietly, or do you want a row?" he kindly asked as we came to a

I told him that I wasn't the man and that he was only wasting his valuable time, but he was bigoted and mulish, and I went along with him to headquarters. I expected to find the chief in, but he was out. He had gone to pay his gas bill or water tax or something. When the detective searched me he seemed to recognize my toothbrush and to be filled with doubts. but he braced up and took the chances. I was placed in a cell with a young man who was suspected of having cashed a forged check. A brotherly feeling soon showed itself, and he led me to the rear of the cell and whispered in my ear:

"They'll take soft to you and promise you everything, but don't give anybody away! If you can raise thirty dollars I'll get you a lawyer who can prove an alibi or get a disagreement of the jury!"

In about two hours I was taken before the chief. He seemed cast down as soon as he discovered that I was not the bank sneak he had been hoping to see, but he soon rallied and gave me a fatherly talk. The gist of it was that if I put the department to any more trouble he'd feel obliged to look into my record.

Business connected with the orphan obliged me to go into town a month later. I wanted to save the detectives trouble and therefore wore goggles and a slouch hat and walked with a limp. I was only clear of the depot when a stranger stepped up and tendered me a bit of advice. It was to the effect that I quietly accompany him to headquarters and save the wear and tear of handcuffs and medical charges. I accepted the advice in the spirit tendered. I started out to tell him some funny stories en route, but he commanded me to shut my head, and added that he was on to my tricks and prepared for them. On this occasion the chief was in. He stemed to be expecting me. His face wore aglad smile until I came to a halt before hm; then the smile disappeared, and he wanted to know what in blank I meant by paying such blankety blank business on that department. I sought to shift the responsibility on to the shoulders of the detextive, but he indignantly protested. Then I sought to establish my right under the constitution to enter Philadelphia on business con ected with an orphan, but they talked me down. I demanded to be locked up as a suspicious character until they could telegraph around the country ant find where I was "wanted," but the chief ordered me to be taken to the front doer and turned out upon the world in a snewstorm. Before I went, however, he dropped a hint that if I was ever pulled in again he'd lay himself out to see that I got fron five to fifteen years somewhere. While I have no orphan business now to cal me to the City of Brotherly Love, I should like to drop in there occasionally to see how things get along. While I don't object to being arrested and searched and recorded, it seems to bother and annov the police, and if persisted in, will probably resuli badly for me. I therefore desire to come to some sort of an understanding which shal be mutually satisfactory to both sides. I'll notify the chief three or four lavi in advance of my coming, or he can notily me what date will be the most convenint for him to receive me. If he says opinions; it he will be in his office from 10 to 12 a. m. or your mind.

from 2 to 4 p. m., I'll arrange to arrive in town so that I can be arrested and taken before him and discharged without loss of time to either. It will be useless for him to hold me beyond a day or two. Most of my crimes have already been atoned for, and the remainder couldn't be made to stick if he tried ever so hard.

No Bonus.-We have received an inquiry from a man in St. Louis asking what bonus this town is giving to those who come here to start in business. No inducement of a financial nature has yet been held out, nor is there talk of such action. Those who look the town over are satisfied that it is a good point. As the tax collector was shot at may get you into serious trottle, and perhaps for two or three to come. When the climate doesn't neglect business it changes twice a day. Land is very cheap. The two acres for our private graveyard only cost us four dollars. Those who have tried agriculture are buying whisky by the gallon, and that's proof enough of the profits. Only one saloon has failed during the past three years, and the young and energetic young man who has the determination to succeed can't strike a better town. That is, of course, he couldn't achieve success here selling hymn books—not right away—and he might find it phill work as a dancing master. J. R. PATCH. Yours truly,

SOUTHWESTERN STEEL POST CO.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 14, 1891. EUREKA GATE Co., Waterloo, Iowa. GENTLEMEN:-Your favor of the 12th inst. duly received. According to the description of the wire you have used, I would say, that it is just what we want. We have no wire nearer than N. Y., so you had better arrange for your own wire, unless your gates are so constructed that we can put on the wire without much trouble and you allow us the difference. Make our order seventy-eight, including the one sent to Chicago instead of seventy-five as was ordered.

Yours truly,

Southwestern Steel Post Co.
