

The Cholera.

That dread disease, Asiatic cholera, which has been raging with such terrible effect in Persia, and India, and later in Germany, and other parts of Europe, has been carried across the Atlantic in emigrant ships. A number of deaths have occurred in N. Y. harbor. No cases have so far occurred on land but there is imminent danger that it may gain a foothold. The authorities are doing all in their power to prevent it, and there is strong talk of entirely stopping immigration till the danger is past.
