

Patriots Hear and Heed.

To all those who read and reflect as I have always tried to do, I wish to say a few words, or give expression to some thoughts which at this hour in our nation's history strike me with force; and I ask all you who read to give them careful thought; for to me they seem very impressive.

The fathers of this republic gave to us, through their toil and suffering, an independent form of government, the territory on which it was established having been wrested from the foreign oppressor by force of arms.

The basis of the government thus given to us was that grand and noble truth "equality to all men under the law and equal rights to all men by the law."

In pursuance of this righteous principle the fathers gave us that grand instrument which we call the constitution which guarantees to every citizen whether he be born in this land or adopted by virtue of our naturalization laws, equal right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and also secures each in his right to worship God in his own way according to the light he receives.

To my comrades in arms who with me took the oath of allegiance in enlisting to fight the battles of that terrible civil war, I want to say a few words. Let me ask you how nearly in accord with the constitution is the system of finance through which a circulating dare you, in face of your sacred oath, vote to sustain in power those who trample it in the dust and violate it in every act of legislation? Dare you by thus disregarding your oath invoke the wrath of that God before whom that sacred obligation was taken? If you do you and yours must suffer that wrath for it will surely follow.

Now to all citizens alike let me appeal in all candor: we are brethren. Can we violate our sacred obligation to God, each other, and future generations, so far as to approve by our vote any party which openly tramples under foot the sacred principles which underlie our government, which violates the very instrument which we all swear when taking any oath of office to support and which it is our sacred duty as citizens to guard and maintain?

I charge upon men who have made our national laws in the past twenty-five years a gross violation of the constitution and challenge them to improve the charge.

Let us as men think carefully on the conditions surrounding us, and as men and brethren decide that we will stand together to redeem our sacred pledges to the constitution, seek to reform the unjust laws which have been forced upon us, and enact in their stead such as will give equal rights to all and special privileges to none, and God will approve our action and bless us in our endeavors. A. C. FENDERSON.

The ease with which the Omaha can be operated is marvelous. The power, the principal part of a hay press is a combination of scientific principles, and so well associated are they that they work in perfect harmony and make the draft so light that one good horse is sufficient to do heavy pressing. The press being made of steel and iron is a sufficient guarantee of its durability, coupled with the further fact that it is put together in the most thorough manner. The most expensive material is used; case hardened steel pins, Norway iron steel rivets and bolts and all other fittings of the highest grade. The power consists of a cam, two rollers and a lever. The lever is operated by a roller on the bottom of the cam and attached to the pitman at the outer end giving the pitman a throw of twenty-four inches at which time cam has taken up roller on the end of the pitman and the lever ceases to work; thus instantly changing the power from a quick motion, while the hay is loose, to a slow powerful motion as the hay becomes more compact. These are only a few of the many excellent points of the Omaha. Write the manufacturer for descriptive circulars giving full particulars.

Superintendent Goudy.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 19, 1892. EDITOR ALLIANCE-INDEPENDENT, Lincoln, Nebraska.

DEAR SIR:—I wish through the columns of your paper to correct the statement made in the Sioux County Journal concerning the treatment of Romine in Omaha.

Mr J. B. Romine of Seward held three meetings in Omaha last week. He had good audiences, and in presenting the issues he fairly outdid himself. He made a very favorable impression on the working men.

In Clay County.

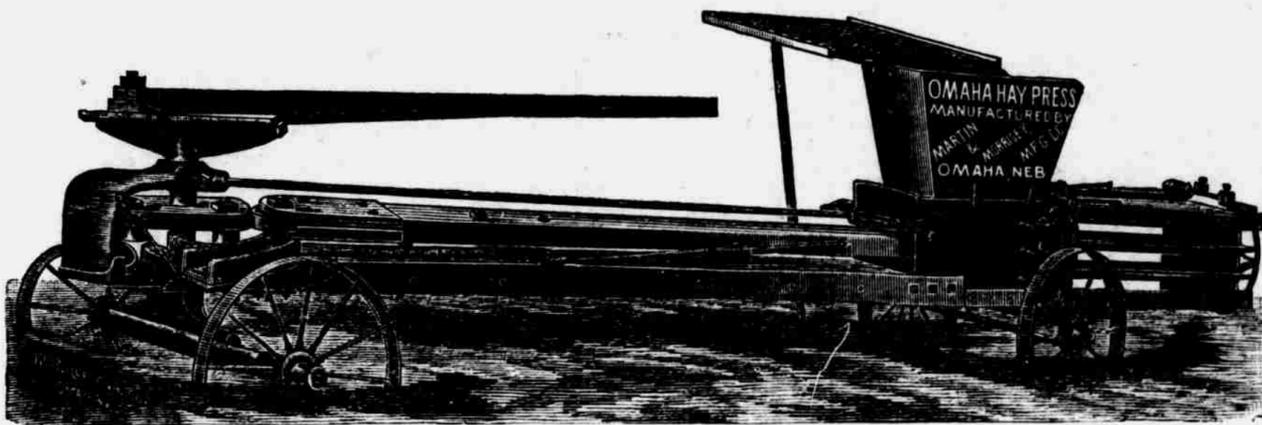

Hon. C. D. Shrader had a good meeting at Edgar September 22nd. Number present 1,000. Eric Johnson also spoke. It was a harvest home picnic and all present enjoyed a good time.

In Grant County.

Hon. J. H. Darner, and Hon. Lingenfelter, candidates for senator and representative on the independent ticket, addressed a large crowd at the opera house at Madrid the evening of September 22. Both are good men and popular and will have a good majority in this county.

Our commercial system is the quintessence of selfishness. Our civilization is a wild, mad rush for the swill-trough, in which the weak are jostled aside and get little, while the strong trample and waste more than would have insured plenty to all. In that rush we are too busy snatching for ourselves and for ours to have time to cultivate consciences. Some day when we get sense enough to quit scrambling, and let even the weakest have plenty, secure plenty to all, we will have time to cultivate something better than our hoggish faculties, and the public opinion will be worth heeding.—Journal of K. of L.

medium is provided for exchange of our productions?

How nearly in accord with the constitution guaranteeing equal rights to all men, are the acts of congress chartering our great national highways to corporations whereby an excessive toll is placed on our products for transportation?

How nearly in accord with the constitution are any of the laws giving express advantages to any class or calling over the masses of the people?

How does our quiet acquiescence in repeated violations of the constitution by our law makers agree with our oath taken with uplifted hand to God in the presence of our fellows appear to him before whom that oath was taken, and how shall we answer to him for violating our vow?

Can we longer vote to sustain an empty name and thus trample in the dust the vow we have made? Think carefully and reflect candidly then answer as you must for your action.

To those citizens of this great republic who are citizen's by adoption only, allow me to say: You probably took the oath of allegiance not knowing what you did.

Your leaders being anxious to use you as tools to elevate them to place and power by your votes did not care whether you knew the force of your act or not, so as they could get power over you. And they have not cared for your welfare but only to advance their own personal interests.

You, by taking the oath of allegiance, are as bound to maintain the constitution as I who was born under it, and you owe to its maintenance your all. You are, by virtue of your oath taken with uplifted hand, bound before God to sacrifice your life, your wealth, your honor, if need be, in its maintenance and defence, and will you, can you,

SUSTAIN HOME INDUSTRY.

A Nebraska Production.

We would respectfully call the attention of our readers to the Omaha Hay Press. The Martin & Morriss Mfg. Co., of Omaha are the makers. Many there are who have used nearly every make of Hay Press during the last twenty years and when they ran through the list found there was still much room for improvement in them. The demand for a press that would fill the requirement of the experienced baler has caused the Omaha to be built and offered to the public. There is no longer any question as to the material to use in the construction of Hay Presses. Steel and steel only is the verdict of all. The press that will do the best work is the first consideration, next ease of operation on men and horses, and next durability. These are questions every intending purchaser of a Hay Press must consider. The manufacturers of the Omaha make the broad claim that they have The Best Hay Press, and give the following reasons in justification of it:

They claim first that their press does the finest and smoothest baling by reason of a folder that folds each charge of hay so perfectly that it is difficult to tell which is top or which is the bottom of the bale. Second that by reason of the herculean power which presses the bale so tight that an auger hole may be bored into it. Third, that by reason of a steel electric tension which is so arranged that it causes the bale case to form the most perfect bale and is provided with a spring that allows the rear end of tying chamber to expand when a wet charge of hay is fed through it.

State Superintendent Goudy at the Custer County institute.

When Superintendent Goudy visited the teacher's institute at Broken Bow last summer he was cordially received.

The county superintendent met him in a friendly manner and introduced him to the instructors and a number of the teachers.

There were, at the time, several school directors waiting to see the county superintendent, and he requested me, as conductor of the institute, to introduce Mr. Goudy to the teachers and make it pleasant for him.

As soon as the morning exercises were over, I asked Mr. Goudy to talk to the teachers and he consented to do so. I then formally introduced him to the institute as the superintendent of public instruction of Nebraska.

Mr. Goudy remained in the institute during the morning session visiting classes and meeting the teachers.

In the afternoon Mr. Goudy was present and I again requested him to address the teachers which he consented to do. Mr. Goudy remained through the day visiting classes and was personally introduced to a large number of teachers.

At the close of the work he expressed himself to me as highly pleased and gratified.

Mr. Goudy certainly has no cause to complain of his reception and treatment while visiting the teachers' institute at Broken Bow last summer.

It is shameful that irresponsible persons presuming to be friends of Mr. Goudy and of education should make such false statements for newspaper gossip.

Very truly,
AMOS HIATT,
Conductor of Institute.
