

BOUND TO NO PARTY.

Treasurer Lyman of the Irish National League Issues An Address to the Irish Voters of America

BOTH OLD PARTIES DENOUNCED.

The Irish Voters Urged to Act Independently, and No Longer Be the Plaything of the Old Parties

Treasurer Lyman's Manifesto.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The following has been issued by the treasurer of the Irish National league of America:

To the Irish American population and especially to the Irish Nationalists: Since the beginning of the presidential campaign we have noticed, from time to time, addresses from committees and associations of Irishmen or Irish-Americans and opinions of certain individuals of the Irish race which we think call for no uncertain protest from the Irish people of this country. Arrayed on the side of either political party we find these committees and associations and individuals whose sole aim seems to be to make either the republican or the democratic party, as the case may be, believe that they have the power to move the Irish vote in the desired direction according to their ideas and affiliations.

"The Irish vote," cries one at republican headquarters, "is safe." There never was a larger rally of Irishmen beneath the republican standard."

"Irishmen, since the time of Wolf Tone," proclaims the time-server at democratic headquarters, "have been with the democrats and never so much as now." Both announce their absolute power to trot up the Irishmen to the polling booths.

It is time this sort of thing should come to an end. We hear very little from either the republicans or democrats about Ireland or Irishmen except during these political campaigns, when the candidates usually profess undying love for Ireland and her cause and have their friends make up their old platitudes intended first, last and all the time for political effect. Why, then, should men posing as Irishmen set themselves up as public auctioneers for the votes of their countrymen. Why should the loves and aspirations of Irishmen for their unhappy country be forced into use in a political game of battledore and shuttlecock in order that a few may have their own ambitions gratified.

What would the shades of O'Connell or Parnell and a host of other Irish patriots who served Ireland, not for self, say if they could oversee their pictures hanging around on the walls of the rooms of the anti-British league in the Ashland house or at the democratic union on Broadway for political effect in many a presidential election. The Irish voters of this country are too intelligent to be hoodwinked by ignoble devices and will cast their votes as Americans and not as the tools of designing men.

These party leaders, furthermore, are merely hoodwinking the political parties. They have no more influence over the Irish votes in this country than have the Esquimaux recently brought for exhibition in Chicago. Irish nationalists, men who have love of your native Ireland at heart, resent the insult to your country and your race poured upon you by the political tricksters on both sides who would make Americans believe that you are devoid of both intelligence and self-respect, a commodity to be bought and sold.

WM. LYMAN,
Treasurer Irish National League of America, on behalf of the Irish Nationalists, 951 East 122nd street.

Morton & Crouse Arguments (?).

Kearney, Nebr., Oct. 17, 1892.

J. Sterling Morton has a pet illustration which he uses in every speech he makes, to prove that hard money is the only safe money for the people; and I see that Crouse has adopted it. It is this: "Suppose there are three men stopping at the same house. One has one thousand dollars in gold, one one thousand dollars in silver, and the other, one thousand dollars in paper. Now, if, while they are all asleep, the house should take fire and all of them should forget their money and allow it to burn, then," says Morton, "the man with the silver and the man with the gold would go and get their metal money out of the ash's, while the man who had the paper would shed great tears because his was lost." At the conclusion of this brain-racking and heart-rending story, republicans and democrats burst into wild and ecstatic applause, while Morton and Crouse stand and look wise, and seem to imagine the bottom has all fallen out of the paper money theory.

To what extremes must parties be driven when men of the intelligence of Morton and Crouse descend to such wretched nonsense! If we are to draw on our imagination, suppose there are three men, each with one thousand dollars of silver, gold and paper, respectively. They all go out to sea in a small boat, and while out, all drop their pocket books in the sea. The silver and gold go to the bottom; the paper will float, and, therefore, the man with the paper would wear a smile, while Morton's fellows would shed great tears because they did not have paper.

The man who would use either of the above supposed cases to bolster up his theory is hard pushed for argument, for there is nothing, absolutely nothing in them. Such argument reminds me of a story: A girl was sitting in one of the old fashioned, houses in front of a great log fire, surrounded by her father's family. All at once she burst into a flood of tears, and would not be comforted. When her mother insisted on knowing the cause of her grief, she said: "I was just thinking if I should get married and should have a baby, and it would fall in the fire and get burned up, I just know it would break my poor heart."

This young lady must have been born under the same star as Morton & Crouse, as she reasoned in the same line as they. Respectfully,
W. L. GREENE.

Greeley County in Line.

EDITOR ALLIANCE-INDEPENDENT:

I have held meetings at the following places in this county since Thursday, the 13th: Brayton, Wolback, Greeley Center, and Spalding. The independents turned out in force at all of these meetings, and all agree in saying that this county will give the independent ticket a large majority, and many say that Van Wyck will have 500 majority.

Freaks of Nature.

The Capital still talks about the government being compelled to pay $1.29 per ounce for silver under a free coinage law. If its editor does not know better than this he is a fit candidate for a lunatic asylum. If he does, and still persists in these efforts at deception, there is another public institution to which he might very properly be assigned. There is no provision in our laws however, for the apprehension of such characters. Their habitual prevarications have been considered harmless and they have been permitted to run at large. They have been regarded as freaks of nature and subjects of amusement to the curious. Their numbers have increased so rapidly of late, however, as to deprive them even of their novelty. As they cease to become objects of curiosity, they become bores; and society has little patience with them. What provision will be made for them hereafter the future alone can determine.—Advocate.
