PROOF POSITIVE.

Than an Affidavit.

In these days of sophisticated advancement no one believes a fish story unless the proofs are at hand. A Chicago artist who is much given to angling makes periodical visits to Wisconsin lakes and invariably brings back large and terrifying varns rehis favorite yarns was that he pulled out a black bass that seemed to be eighteen inches long, and just as he was taking it in over the side of the boat it got away from him.

One night at his club he related how he and a man from Milwaukee went out before breakfast and got over 120 pounds of cropples. "What became of them?"

"Well, we ran out of ice and had to give them away," which explanation was greeted with derisive laughter. He brought hom : once a long pine stick on which were two notches, indicating the length of a pike taken one evening just as the sun went down, and which lasted the camp three days.

"Anybody can make a couple of notches in a stick," said the skeptics. It is very trying. He would return from an expedition full of enthusiasm and large claims, only to meet some between you and me, did you catch anything?"

Finally, driven to an extremity, he adopted the scheme which gave him reputation. He painted on a screen the picture of a small house, such as may be found at any fishing camp.

Against this screen he would hang a six-inch fish, the average size of his graph of the fish and the background. According to the photograph the fish would reach from the eaves almost to the ground. The length would be, apparently, anywhere from four to six feet.

When they hoot at his claims and discount his narratives he says: "Gentlemen, the camera tells no lies. Here is a photograph of the monster, the largest ever taken from the lake See for yourselves."
