THE LARGE DEMAND. That we are having an enormous sale for the Odell is attributed to the fact that we have no competition. It being the only low-priced and practical machine on the market: so and E00 typewriters are things of the past. They, like high-priced sewing ma-chines, have had their day. No intelligent business or professional man is going to pay $00 for a typewriter when the Odell, costing four-fiths less, will do better work than any high-priced machine. Neatness and speed is what the business men of today want, and there is now no excute for anybody to be without a typewriter, either in his office or his home. The Odell comes within the reach of all, and it can be duly said that 'it fills a long felt want." We are meeting the de-mands of the people with a typewriter that has no equal.
