COMING TO THE PAPER AGE. Days of Brase and Iron Passing and a New Era Dawaing.

The world has seen its iron and its braren age, but the Paper Rec ord says this is the age of paper. We are making so many things of paper that it will soon be true that without paper there is nothing made. We live in paper houses wear paper clothing and sit on paper cushions in paper cars rolling on paper wheels. If we lived in Bergen, Norway, we could go on Sundays to a paper church. We do a paper business over paper counters buying paper goods paying for them with pape money and deal in paper stocks paper margins. We row races in paper boats for paper prizes. We go to paper theaters where paper actors play to paper audiences.

As the age develops the coming man will become more deeply enmesh ed in the paper net. He will awake in the morning and creep from under the paper clothing of his paper bed and put on his paper dressing gown and his paper slippers. He will walk over paper carpets, down paper stairs and, seating himself in a paper chair, will read the paper news in the morning paper. A paper belt will call him to his breakfast, cooked in a paper oven, served on paper dishes laid on a paper cloth on a paper table. He will wipe his lips with a paper napkin and having put on his paper shoes, paper hat and paper coat, and then taking his paper stick (he has the choice of two descriptions already), he will walk on a paper pavement or ride in a paper carriage to his paper office.

He will organize paper enterprises and make paper profits. He will sait the ocean on paper steamships and navigate the air in paper balloons. He will smoke a paper cigar or paper tobacco in a paper pipe, lighted with a paper match. He will write with a paper pencil, whittle paper sticks with a paper knife, go fishing with a paper fishing rod, a paper line and a paper book, and put his catch in a paper basket. He will go shooting with a paper gun. loaded with paper car tridges and will defend his country in paper forts with paper cannon and paper bombs. Having lived his paper life and achieved a paper fame and pape: wealth he will retire to paper peace.

The e will be a paper funeral at which the mourners, dressed in paper crape, will wipe their eyes with paper handkerchiefs and the preacher will preach in a paper pulpit. He will lie in a paper coffin. Elsewhere in this paper it will be seen that he has a chance of doing so already if he is a paper-we mean pauper. He will be wrapped in a paper shroud, his name will be engraved on a paper plate, and a paper hearse, adorned with paper plumes, will carry him to a paper lined grave over which will be raised a paper monument.

MEAT EATERS.

Sounder Physically and Less Exposed to Disease Than Others.

Many races of men tive entirely on animal ood, and these are the most hardy, and from all I have been able to gather from the subject the most free from disease of all kinds says a Sir Francis Head says of the Pampas Indians: They are all horsemen on rather, pass their lives on horse back. In spite of the climate, which is burning hot in summer and free; ing cold in winter, these brave men who have never yet been subdued. are entirely naked and have not even a covering for their head. They live together in tribes each of which is governed by a cacique but they have no fixed place of residence. Where the pasture is good there are they to be found until it is consumed by their horses, and they then instantly move to a more verdant spot. They have neither bread, fruit nor vegetables, but they subsist entirely on the flesh of their mares."

Describing the effect on himself of this diet Sir Francis says: "After I had been riding three or four months and had lived on beef and water I found myself in a position which I can only describe by saying that I felt no exertion could kill me, although I constantly arrived so completely exhausted that I could not speak, yet a few hours' sleep upon my saddle on the ground always so completely restored me that for a week I could daily be upon my horse before sunrise and ride till two or three hours after sunset and have really tired ten or twelve horses a day. This will expeople in South America are said to ride, which I am confident could only be done on beef and water." The Gouachos of the Argentine Republic live entirely on roast beef and sait scarcely ever tasting farinacious or other vegetable food, and their sole beverage is mate or Paraguay tea, taken without sugar.

Home-Cheering Mottoes.

Mrs. F. (to Fogg. lighting his evening cigar)-Daniel, I'm thinking of buying some new mottoes for our rooms. What kind of sentiment would you suggest?

Fogg-Bother! I don't care what you get. Only let it be something new. We've had enough of God Bless Our Home," The Lord Is My Shepherd " and all that sort of thing. Let it be something new.

Mrs F .- I'm real glad, Daniel, that our opinions are exactly alike. How would this suit you: "No Smoking

FARMING IN INDIA.

The Crudest Implements and Harness Are Esed.

The ludia farmer has hardly any tools and those he has are of the simplest kind. By a very crude implement which can scarcely be called a plaw, the land is easily rooted up. This plow consists of a triangular piece of wood about 18 inches in length and 6 inches in diameter at the larger end, the other end being pointed. On the flat side of this bit of wood a groove is made into which a flat piece of iron. a foot in length, an inch wide and half an inch thick is inserted and held in its place by a staple. The staple underneath does not interfere with the rooting. This iron bar, which is pointed, serves as a nose or pointer to the plow. The triangular bit of wood is morticed into an upright stick the latter about four feet in length, at the top of which is a wooden pin on the front side, which is for a handle. About eighteen inches from the ground a strip of board four inches wide, an inch and a half thick and eight feet long is inserted into the upright stick and serves as a beam and pole. The yoke is a straight stick six feet long three inches in diameter, with four wooden pins, each six inches long, one on each side of the neck of the bullocks. A small hemp rope, or grass twine goes under the bullocks' necks to keep the yoke in its place. The beam of the plow has a few notches or catches under it near the end and is fastened to the yoke by a small grass rope or twine. The plow makes no furrow but simply roots or tears up the soil and the plowman with his little goad or whip in one hand, the other holding the wooden pin in the upright stalk. walks by the side of the

The cattle are of the Brahmini kind, white, slender-bodied, longlegged, and about half or one-third the weight of oxen in the United States. They are very lean, as about the only feed they get for some months before the rains, and during the plowing season, is bhoosa or wheat straw and chaff. To see a man, weighing less than 100 pounds, with only a strip of cloth around his loins and a like strip about his bead, driving a pair of little lean cattle. swinging his whip and dodging from side to side of his plow and calling his bulls by the endearing name of my daughters," seems a sight ospecially when first observed by an American farmer. Plowing is hard work, both for the little cattle and the man himself, particularly if the ground is hard and baked, and if it is the first plowing. The best a plowman can do is to tour up about half an acre a day, and then the work is poorly done. The land has to be plowed in this way a number of times especially for the more substantial crops.

A pair of cattle cost from $5 to $20, but the average price of those working cattle in the Northwest provinces is about $10 a pair. The average cost of a plow is 40 cents. The only other implement used is a log, or slab of wood six or eight feet long, drawn sideways across the field, by one or two pairs of cattle to crush the cloda or smooth the surface. After the soil writer in the Gentleman's Magazina is well pulverized, the last plowing seed from his hand, into the furrow, or mark after the plow.

> WORSE THAN THE INFERNO. Horrors of a Prospecting Trip in Lower California.

A man arrived at Alamo lately who, in the opinion of the Lower Californian, could give Dante pointers on the extent and attractions of the infernal regions. He was the owner of a good macho and complete prospecting outfit when he left the aguaje of Burro Flaco, in the heart of the peninsula, many weeks ago, and all he had as he dragged himself into La Flor camp, near Alamo, was a blanket and an appetite muy fuerte. His mule refused to go around a precipice on San Pedro, and on his persuasion it backed too pronto for him. The man landed in a mescal clump but the macho chewed sedge in Proserpine's dark garden from then on. In a day of hard work the desgraciado pulled out with a kit of a hundred pounds which in each weary mile grew lighter as he dropped tools, rifle, clothes and grub. He was in great agony as to water, but fortunately all the arroyos were full. The society of a few caddish mountain lions or low-down coyotes was all that saved him from madness while traversing the lonesome hills. At Chopalola canon his eyes were gladdened by the sight of a deep-green forest of sycamore oak, alamos and pine, in which sported quail, rabbits, lions, lynx and fat deer. The sight of living things cheered him as watersnakes cheered the skinny-handed old mariner, giving him strength to take his slow trail along the yawning desert down steep slopes into swampy clenegas and up across lianos pedregosos and through ramas of cactus, maguey, jupiter, mesquit, filaree, sage, poppy chemisal, wild oats, cat clawa visnagas and the thousands of varieties of flowers that run riot over the hills and blush from high mountain tops. Six weeks of wandering through forth-rights and meanders landed him in La Flor, where the generous Frenchmen filled him with bouillon and took him to Alamo. He rested and fed up, and now, one of the permanent fixtures of Mescal avenue in that burg is the man that can give pointers to old Dante. He tells his tale generally in the Diablo Verde, with a fiddle prelude and on great occasions of 'conwivial" import an interlude is introduced and all sing

SHE HAD PURE GRIT.

The Man Who Turned His Oven Into Her Field Got the Worst of It.

Talking about pure grit " said a woman who was lunching at the Colonial club in New York. I knew a woman once who was full of it.

Tell us about her," exclaimed the other two women of the luncheon party. .. Who was she?"

Why, she was my mother," answered the first speaker. 'She was the littlest little woman I ever saw. but there was courage and fight enough in her to stock a regiment. I don't mean she was a nagging creature making trouble for everybody. She was the sweetest kindest woman in the world. It was only when somebody tried to impose on her or on some of us girls that she came out as a fighter. Let me tell you a story about her, and you'll see what I

·Well, we were living in Iowa when my father, a minister, by the way, died and left mother to manage a farm and to care for a big family of girls. The grain was high in the field, and it had to be cut at once. Mother entered into negatiations with a neighbor, and was just about to close a trade with him when she discovered that he was trying to overreach insisting on terms that were exorbitant and absurd.

"Mother told him that she'd get somebody else to cut the grain, and that made him so angry that he was quite rude in his speech. But mother shut the door in his face and left him to have his sputter out all by himself.

That night, about 1 o'clock, mother was awakened by a noise out in the yard. She slipped out of bed and peered through the window. There was that same farmer engaged in taking down the bars of the fence that surrounded the field of grain that mother wouldn't let him cut. The bars down, the man went out into the road for a minute, and the next minute he came back driving a voke of oxen, which he turned loose into the field.

.. What did your mother say to the man?" asked one of the listeners.

·She didn't say anything.' "Didn't she tell him to take the cattle right out of the field?" "No indeed; that was not her way of doing th ngs. What she did first was to dress herself. Then she stole quietly down stairs and out into the Then she went to the barn and vard. got an exgoad. Then she bounded to the grain field and drove the oxen out of it."

And then she went back to bed. I suppose," said one of the women. Or did she watch the rest of the night?'

Neither. She drove those oxen a mile and a half down the road till she came to a great field of corn which belonged to that awful man. Then she took down the bars and wished the oxen good-morning.

·On the way back she stopped ong enough to open the gate of a pasture in which was quite a herd of steers and to set some of them moving toward the cornfield, and they found that field, I can assure you

"Next morning mother told us what she had done, and we just hugged her and kissed her till she

'And what came of it?"

·Oh yes-that's the best part of the story. The neighbors somehow found out what had happened, and they were so pleased over it that they came and cut mother's grain for nothing."

But just think of that ninety-fivepound woman driving a yoke of oxen

Nebraska, sell at public auction to the high-est bidder for cash the property described in said order of sale as follows to-wit:

Lot forty-three (43) in Windsor Place Extension an Addition to the city of Omaha, as surveyed, platted and recorded, all in Douglas county is the stage had been held up pretty frequently, so we all went fixed for reparty consisted of two army officers, a speculator, four miners and myself. The stage had been held up pretty frequently, so we all went fixed for trouble. Every man had a brace of six-shooters, and we were just aching to have the road-agents tackle us; at least, we talked that way. We commented very unfavorably upon men who yielded to the demands of the freebooters without a struggle, and promised them a warm time if they tackled us. One man had little and promised them a warm time if they tackled us. One man had little to say. He was the speculator, a red-headed man with a squint. Finally one of the army officers asked him what he would do if the robbers attacked us and he replied that he did not know. As we swung around a sharp bend in the road, the stage pulled up with a jerk, the driver threw up his hands, and almost before we knew it we were looking into the barrel of a Winchester. Well, sir, that lone robber marched us out and stood us up in line, with our hands above our heads. Then he threw each man a small sack and made him pull it over his head. We all complied, but one. The red-headed speculator pulled his gun and shot the bandit so full of holes that he died before he could touch the ground. Then he climbed up knocked the driver off the box, and drove the stage into the next station, with the most crestfallen lot of braggarts aboard that ever wore guns and neglected to use them."

DR. B. J. KAV MEDICAL CO.—Gentlemen:
About four years ago I was taken with La Grippe and after recovering I had a very bad cough. I coughed almost continually ever since. I tried several doctors and various cough medicines, but could not get any relief. Your Dr. Kay's Lung Balm was recommended to me and after taking one package the cough left me entirely and I consider myself entirely cured. I cheerfully recommend your Lung Balm to all who are in the very bad condition that I was. Yours truly.
