

Settled.

To all but the thick-headed sons of Leo, the following testimony will be satisfactory in showing that certain eminent commanders are Protestants, and not Romanists as universally proclaimed by papal priests and papers:—

Montpellier, Va., May 23 1898.—My Dear Sir—I am authorized by the Hon. Charles Dewey of this city to state that Rear Admiral Dewey is a loyal communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church.

He is not a Roman Catholic I hope you will contradict the story. You are welcome to use my name with Mr. Dewey's if you wish.

Yours truly, A. N. Lewis, Rector of Christ Church.

A New York daily says:— "Commodore Schley's name is pronounced as if spelled 'Schly'; he comes from an old Pennsylvania family of Irish extraction, and is a Protestant and a Freemason."

The Boston Transcript prints this:— "Rear Admiral Sampson is a member of the Presbyterian church of the Covenant in Washington and of the Men's Society, which is a literary club connected with the church. He was always regular in his attendance during the several years that he was stationed in Washington, and took a great deal of interest in philanthropic work."

Col. Edwin A. Sherman, the Masonic veteran so well known in Boston, writes to the Masonic Tyler that at a meeting of Oakland, Cal., Lodge, F. & A. M., held May 7, a resolution was passed congratulating "Our Worshipful Brother Joseph B. Coughlan, Past Master of Solano Lodge, Vallejo, Cal., and captain of the U. S. cruiser Raleigh, upon being unhurt in the battle of Manila."—Citizen.

John Ireland's Graft.

The New York Herald interviewed a prominent layman of the Roman Catholic church soon after the recent silver jubilee of Archbishop Corrigan, and this is what he had to say:

"The reason for the failure of the Vatican to send an anniversary gift is included in the story of the peace negotiations. The one bears strongly upon the other. Primarily, it should be borne in mind that Archbishop Ireland was not designated as the ambassador of Rome. That is the holy father did not take the initiative in the matter. Archbishop Ireland went to Washington at the time when the nations were on the verge of war, for the purpose of raising money. As the story was explained to me on high authority, he came in contact with a prominent official of the government, in pursuit of his purpose, who proposed an exchange of good offices—financial aid for the church, as against the influence of Rome, exerted upon Spain, wholly bear in mind, for the maintenance of peace. The world knows the history of the negotiations. Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Ireland, Bishop Keane, and Bishop O'Connell, were the prime movers on this side of the water. They failed."

"Concerning Archbishop Ireland's going to Rome and its probable meaning, the friends of Archbishop Corrigan are puzzled and not quite serene. I was informed that they are seriously contemplating sending some distinguished layman to Rome to guard his interests from any influence which may possibly be exerted against them. I could not gain any positive knowledge on this point, however."

The Spanish Church.

"Religion," remarked the traveler returned not long ago from Spain, and by the way he was a good Catholic, "as it is observed in Spain is one of the most interesting studies in that country. The virgin, for instance, always wears the royal crown and ranks as a Queen. She has a household composed of the greatest ladies of the kingdom, who take care of her wardrobe, chapels, etc.; she also has landed estates, less now than formerly, which are administered in her name and the revenue invested for her cult. The savior is treated as a king, called 'His Divine Majesty,' and when the host passes by any barrack, the guard turns out, presents arms and the royal anthem, 'La Marcia Real,' is played.

"The wardrobe of the Virgin del Sagrario at Toledo is well worth seeing for its wealth is unrivaled by the toilet of the most extravagant queens of the world. Her mantle for gala days is entirely of silver and gold, with 78,000 pearls embroidered on it, while the diamonds, rubis and emeralds scattered all over it are simply countless. Her ordinary robes for every day wear, so to speak, are quite as splendid, in all sorts of colors, material and decorations of embroidery and fine needlework. They are presented from popes, kings, queens and the mighty of the earth. Her imperial crown, dating from the sixteenth century, cost $25,000 in gold and workmanship, not counting the jewels, which glitter in it like the stars of night. The bracelet, made by Henrado, a famous silversmith of the sixteenth century, also cost $10,000. Nobody knows what was the value of the gold and jewels given to this virgin by the old Queen Isabella, as she was, in addition, the virgin's mistress of the robes.

"Villages boast of their cristos and of their virgins, as the Virgen de la Paloma (of the dove), de la Basca (the white lady), and others, and when rival processions meet the confrades have more than once insulted the rival image, pelted it with stones and mud and defended their own with the knife and bludgeon. Really, one can scarcely realize when he sees things like this everywhere he goes, that Spain is of the nineteenth century.—Washington, D. C., Star.

Romanism Elsewhere.

Glancing further over the Romish horizon, we behold indications of a widespread revolt in a quarter least suspected. It is found not among the laity so much as among the clergy, and this, not in America, but in Europe. The notable movement in France, of which we made mention some weeks ago, is losing none of its significance; but is upon the increase. A number of priests have not been content to utter a simple protest against Romish abuses and excesses, but have enrolled themselves as students in colleges in Protestant churches in Paris and other places. But, perhaps, a more significant revolutionary sign is visible in Rome itself, where a new paper has been started, called La Nuovo Roma (New Rome). Dissident and protesting priests use it as their organ of expression. In it they complain of the spiritual degeneracy going on in the church through the supremacy of the Jesuits. But more noteworthy is that part of the paper which bears this bold heading, "Let us free ourselves of the papacy." This new candidate for popular favor and recognition has an increasing patronage, being warmly welcomed by both clergymen and laymen, who send to it communications of ringing interest and meaning. Ultramontanians are becoming alarmed, and one of their leading journals says: "The old, stubborn, fault-finding spirit which characterized the revolution of the sixteenth century has been awakened." Will the former counter persecuting and suppressing spirit also be aroused? Will Rome tolerate freedom of thought, speech and action as it takes form and color in a growing revolt from its ranks?—Ex.

Grant's Prophecy of the Future.

To the Editor of the New York Sun: Sir—Apropos of the great speech of the Marquis of Salisbury on "Living and Dying Nations," delivered in London May 4th of the present year, it might not prove uninteresting to some of your readers to quote a few lines from my book, "Impressions of a Cartoonist," which I am now at work on.

On the occasion of a visit to my home in Morristown, in May, 1877, Gen. Grant was wont to dwell with peculiar pleasure on his early army days in the far West, and to emphasize that his then-born confidence in the great future of that magnificent section had never been shaken.

This will make clear the following extract from my book, which refers to a later visit, just following his return from his tour of the world, in 1882. "I had looked forward with the greatest pleasure, and, indeed I may own, curiosity, to Gen. Grant's return with us, for I appreciated most fully his profound political sagacity and mental acumen, and was eager to gather his impressions of men and countries, gained under advantages granted to no man heretofore.

Henry F. Bowers

"Therefore, upon his arrival at his house, it can be imagined that I was not long in plunging 'in medias res.'"

"To my utter surprise, the General immediately launched out into the most glowing panegyric upon our West, the strides that industry and progress had made since his ante-bellum experience, and seemingly could neither exhaust his admiration of what had been already accomplished, nor prophesy too strongly as to its possibilities—"

"Well, but, General, I broke in, 'I mean, what made the greatest impression upon you in your foreign travels?'"

"Without a second's hesitation, 'Nast, the Latin races are doomed,' said he impressively."

Thus unerringly had Gen. Grant, years ago, analyzed and formulated the situation so perfectly appreciated and so forcibly defined by England's Premier in his grand speech.
