Trouble has arisen between Germany and the little republic of Hayti, owing to the arrest by the Haytian police of a man claiming to be a German citteen. The German minister demanded his release and a payment of fifty thousand dollars indemnity. The manwas set free, but Hayti is unwilling to pay Indemnity. Germany threatened to send a crutser to press her claim; at the remenstrance of our government she abandoned her purpose.

The gluttony of the people who Bock to public receptions in Washington with less decorum than is usually preserved in front of the barkeeper's walnut has provoked retaliation. The ladies of the cabinet announce that refreshments will no longer be served. The households of the cabinet members will no longer be embraced in a free lunch route. Thus will end scenes which have been a disgrace to the cap-Ital of the country for a great many years and an intolerable nuisance will be abolished.

The holiday publications are responsible for a great evil. They usher In the most poular of the saints two months before he is ready for the reception and while his attire is unfitted to the occasion. They put the family man to large and unnecessary expense and apprehension. They force the Christmas thought and the Christmas purse so premature that the world tires of them before they should have begun. Shall they be issued next year on the fourth of July or some time in September? Time has no forelock now. It has been yanked out.

The diabolical assassination of Wil-Ham Terriss, the distinguished British actor, by a worthless crank with a homicidal mania, brings up before us again and in a most urgent form the question of dealing with this class of peets. There is no law for punishing or even locking up a crank, no matter how dangerous he may notoriously be. its until he commits murder, and then offers to society the beggardly reparation of the gallows. The peril is one which the individual must meet for himself. Government avenges him only after he has been slain and his family desolated.

The postal authorities are properly paying attention to a class of advertisements that has appeared too frequently in some periodicals of late. The advertiser promises to give valuable prices to persons sending him accurate colutions of a collection of "puzzles," of which the subjoined is a fair sample; "Supply the missing letters in the following name of an important New England city-B-st-n." It is said that the people have been swindled out of a sum of money large in the aggregate through this transparent fraud. Periodicals will henceforth publish such advertisements at the risk of being excluded from the mails.

A short cut to notoriety has been effeeted by a woman of Paris who contributed and collected ten thousand francs toward the Guy de Maupassant monument, recently unveiled in the Parc Monceau, on the condition that her own portrait be introduced. The ludierous result, the figure of a fashionably dressed woman reclining in a long chair at the foot of a bust of the poet, is characterized by a writer in a London newspaper as "an advertisement in marble for some leading dressmaker." Human vanity takes many forms and some persons choose to bask in the world's gaze, even at the expense of self-respect or of life itself.

Two farmers were once discussing their local paper. One thought it had too many advertisements in it. The other replied; "In my opinion the advertisements are far from being the least valuable part of it. I look them over carefully and save at least five times the cost of the paper each week through the business advantages I get from them," said the other: "I believe you are right-I know that they pay me well and rather think it is not good taste to find fault with the advertisements after all. It pays any man with a family to take a good local paper for the sake of the adverysements if nothing more. And if business men fail to give farmers a chance to read advertisements in the local paper, they are blind to their own interests, to say the least of it. "You never trade with me," said a business man to a prosperous farmer. The number of cartle in stock in Britain is given at 6,500,497, of which 2,532,379 are cows and helfers in milk or in calf, and 1,323,230 are returned as being two years and above. As against the two preceding returns, cows show respective increases in number of 20.-704 and 46,559; while the cattle of two years old and above present relative decreases of 41,827 and 108,295. Of cattle which have attained the age of one year there is an increase of 54,428 over the return of 1896, and of 170,473 over that of 1895. As compared with the total of 1896, calves or cattle under or in calf, and 1,323,230 are returned as one year of age show a decrease of 26,390, but present an increase of 37,-524 as against that of 1895. Pigs have fallen considerably in number, being 536,499 less than in 1896, and 542,129 below the total of 1895.
