Parkauging Microbea.

"About a year ago," remarks a gosstp. "the congregation of one of our very wall-known churches uplown adopted, after long and serious debate. the individual communion cups. The older members stremunnaly disapproved of the innovation, and even went so far a sto say that 'the Lord knew all about microbos, but when He was on earth the large cup was used." However, the younger members, jed by an aspiring young physician, triumphed, and the tiny cops made their appearance. Last Sunday happened to be the communion day, and now comes the tragic part of the late, but it occurs not in public. The cups were collected, the few drops of wine left in them emptied into a pan, and, horror of horrors! the drops collectively poured back into the bottle, microbes and all. The question is, can this be a plan by which the old folks continue to have their own way and exchange their microbes, or is it simply economy "-Philadelphia Record.

A Snake's Eyes Never Closest.

One of the most curious facts with regard to snakes is that their eyes are never closed. Sleeping or waking, alive or dead, they are always wide open. This is because there are no eyelids. The eye is protected only by a strong scale, which forms a part of the epidermal envelope, and is cast off in a piece with that every time the reptile moults. This eye plate is as clear and transparent as glass, and allows the most perfect vision, while at the same time it is so hard and tough as to perfectly protect the delicate organ within from the thorns and twigs among which, in flight from enemies or in pursuit of prey, the reptile so often hurriedly glides, as any close observer of the habits of the snake can readily discover.

> Where the Ocean Is Deepest A little more than thirty miles from the coast of Japan the Pacific ocean has been found to be more than 4,643 fathoms deep. Some officers who were surveying for a telegraph cable found their wire broke at this depth without reaching the bottom. This is said to be the deepest sounding ever made, and is so deep that the two highest mountains in Japan, placed one over the other in this abyss, would leave the summit of the upper one two-thirds of a mile below the surface of the water.

A Tree of Copper.

The Duke of Devonshire owns the greatest curiosity in England. It is known as the weeping tree. This imitation tree is made of copper and is so dexterously contrived and cunningly painted that at a careless glance one does not distinguish it from a real tree. It drips water on tourists who wander neath its shade.
