(From Young Cruender.) It was not on the field of battle, It was not on a ship at sea, But a fate far worse than either,

That stole him away from me. Twas the death in the ruby wine-cup, That the reason and senses drown; He drank the alluring poison,

And thus my boy went down.

Tis only the same old story. That mothers so often tell With accents of infinite sadness,

Like the tones of a funeral bell. But I never thought when I heard it, I should learn all the meaning myself;

I thought he'd be true to his mother; I thought he'd be true to himself.

But alas for my hopes, all delusion! Alas for his youthful pride!

Alas! who are safe when danger Is open on every side?

No har in their pathway be thrown? To save, from the terrible maelstrom. The thousands of boys going down?

"Satan often paints sin with virtue's sent it in its own nature and dress, the soul would rather fly from it, than yield to it, and therefore he presents it to us, not in its own proper colors, but painted and grided over with the name and show of virtue, that we may the more easily be overcome by it, and take the more pleasure in committing it.

ELI PEREINS TELLS A TEMPERANCE STORY.

John Jones began at the age of fifteen R. E. MASSEY, to build a monument, and finished it at fifty. He worked night and day, often all night long, and on the Sabbath. He seemed to be in a great hurry to get it done. He spent all the money he earned upon it-some say $50,000. Then he borrowed all he could, and when no one would loan him any more, he would take his wife's dresses, and sell them to get more money to fimsh that monu-

They say he came home one day, and was about to take the blankets that lay over his sleeping baby to keep him warm, and his wife tried to stop him; but he drew back his fist and knocked her down, and then went away with the blankets and never brought them back, and the poor baby sickened and died from exposure. At last, there was not anything in the house. The poor heart-broken wife soon followed the baby to the grave. Yet John Jones kept working all the more at the monument I saw him when he was about lifty. The monument was nearly done; but he had worked so hard at it that I hardly knew him, ne was so worn; his clothes were all in tatters, and his hands and face, indeed, his whole body, were covered with scars which he got in laying up some of the stones. And the wretched man had been so little in society all Report of school district No. 1. That may appear strange, but I have observed that all who build such monuments as John's prefer oaths to any other word.

Now, come with me and I will show you John's monument. It stands in a beautiful part of the city, where five streets meet. Most men put such things in a cemetery; but John had his own way, and put it in one of the finest
