The Solids and Fluids in Corn

We all know our common Indian corn and what a quantity of food for man and beast it furnishes. Take a large plant of fully matured corn; make it into a compact shape and weigh it. Then put it into an oven and dry it thoroughly, as a chemist surprised to note the amount which this mature corn contained. Now take the dried corn plant and burn it slowly so that no part of the ashes can be wa away; continue the burning entil the aches are left perfectly winter ing the ashes in a this for this purpose. The character of our occupations tion. There is something so stimulatinstead of 55, and Charles Dickens would have dropped at 40. There is something in all our occupations which prediaposes to disease. If we be stout, to disorders ranging from fever to apoplexy. If we be frail, to diseases ranging from consumption to paralysis. Printers rarely reach 50 years. Watchmakers, in marking the time for others, shorten their own. Chemists breathe death in their laboratories, and potters absorb paralysis. Painters fall under their own brush. Foundrymen take death in with the fillngs. Shoemakers pound away their own lives on the last. Overdriven merchants measure off their own lives with the yard-stick, Millers grind their own lives with the grist. Masons dig their graves with the trowel. And in all our occupations and professions there are the elements of peril.

In view of this, I advise that you have your temporal matters adjusted. Do not leave your worldy affairs at the mercy of administrators. Have your receipts properly pasted, and your letters filed, and your books balanced. If you have "trust funds," see that they are rightly deposited and accounted for. Let no widow or orphan scratch on your tombetone, "Thism an wronged me of my inheritadce." Many a man has died, leaving a competency, whose property has, through his own careless ness afterward been divided between the administrators, the surrogate, the lawyers, and the sheriffs.
