A Pilat's Life.

The life of a pilot is filled with delightful uncertainties. He is like a caled bottle tossed on the waves of the ocean. He may be picked up in a day, and may be carried over the sea for more than week before some passing steamer comes to "rescue him." A pilot boat left New York prepared for a weeks' eraise. Within ten hours from the time she left the bay she was back at Staten Island, all her pilots having been taken off by incoming steamers. She put to the sea again and started up the coast. One of her stations is at Newport, and she reached there eleven days after her second blue grass he planted in the spring is start, having cruised all over the ocean forcing itself up between the bricks between New York and Newport withground the lawns in spite of all he can out having sighted a single steamer.
