Wild Horses in Russia.

In the steppes of Russia, where wolves abound and the horses lead s wild life and have to shift for them selves, it is said that a young colt wil sometimes be made so furious by the persecutions of his enemies that he will rush wildly among a drove o wolves and bite and strike until he has slautered a large number of them These horses are exceptionally fierce rendered so, it is supposed, by the exhould relax treme variations in the climate. A one time of the year they suffer fron the intense heat of a tropical suand at another they live among raging snowstorms and extreme cold -Washington tar.

Muscular Exercise and Health.

As many diseases, prominent among which are those of the abdominal and and pelvic organs, are the con sequences of congestion, and as goo circulation does much for the pre vention of such congestion, muscula exercise, by improving the genera circulation both by increasing th heart and aiding in the venous return will do much to prevent a large clas of diseases.-Dr. J. M. Rice in Popula science Monthly.

At a Feast

There is a new shape for the dinner table-a triangle. The host is seated in the middle of the shortest side and the hostess at the meeting of the two longer ones. The arrangement bringthe entertainers and the entertained nearer together than at the ordinary square or round tables. A single cloth is not used to these triangular tables. but rather narrow scarfs of heavy open work. Between the scarfs and the center piece the space is filled with bonbon and salted almond dishes-Food.

It is nothing rare in China for boy! twelve to fourteen years old to marry The physical, moral and intellectua development of the contracting parties has nothing to do with the matter Other considerations entirely regulate the affair. An old Chinese aphorism says that the great business of life is ended when the sons and daughters are married. The Chinese parents do not care to run the danger of postponing the marriage of their children, especial ly of their sons, until after their owr death.-Exchange.

Champagne

Champagne was discovered or in rented by accident, like so many other good things. About 1668 one Perignor vas cellarer in a Benedictine convent n Hautvilliers, Champagne, Provilence had evidently marked him out um a strong head and a discriminating palate. The products of the neighboring vineyards were various, and, like a true Benedict. Dom Perignon hit upon the idea of "marrying" the various wines. He had noted that one kind of soil imparted fragrance, another gen grosity, and discovered that a white wine could be made from the blackes grapes which would keep far better than the wine from white grapes doreover, the happy thought struck aim that a piece of cork was a more suitable stopper than the flax dipped it oil which had heretofore served that purpose. His wine became famous and its manufacture extended through out Champagne.

Then be happened upon a still great er discovery-how to make an effervescent wine, a wine that burst out o the bottle and overflowed the glass whose fragrance and exhilarating qualities were doubled by this process At that time the glory of the Ro Ledger. In this case it will not prove unintersting to mention some of the remarkble opinions entertained by the early experimenters in this line. Flogel esimated the height of the various surors observed by him at from 90 to 310 miles above the earth; Reimann found that one observed by him was at east 500 miles high, and Norkenskjold's earlier deductions gave such phenomena an average height of 125 miles. Then Leemstome came forward with the announcement that he had taken notes and observations on an auroral display that was not separated from the earth by more than 1,000 feet, while Hildebrandson concurred to the extent of declaring that many of the dis-plays were below the clouds.—St Louis itemable.
