Dr. Frankel, a well known author of Weimar, Germany, had the temerity to criticize a German army officer publicly last summer because he had forced his men to take long marches in the great heat, thus causing the death of one soldier. The doctor has been arraigned and fined $35.

Manuel Training.

It is perhaps illustrative of the growing interest in the subject of manuel training that an eastern political club has among its declaration of principles this: "Proper manuel training should be made a part of the public school system." It also declares that "reasonable and constitutional legislation in the interest of manuel labor should be constantly urged." There has been a marked progress in public sentiment within a few years, particularly in the east, in favor of making manuel training a part of the public school system and a considerable advance has been made in incorporating it as a part of that system. There appears no reason to doubt that the sentiment favorable to this movement will continue to grow, because the conditions that prompt it are steadily growing. The demand is becoming more and more urgent from year to year for a place in the mechanical trades for American boys, both for the reason that other channels of employment are overcrowded and that the trades offer a better means of livelihood than most other vocations. The market for skilled labor expands with the growth of the industries of the country and the general development, and the intelligent youth of the country are beginning to understand that the largest opportunities and the highest rewards are to be found in the workshops rather than in the stores and counting houses.

Europe has furnished this country valuable instruction and example in the matter of manuel training. Sweden instituted it twenty years ago, in what is known as the "sloyd" system, which technically means the different kinds of handwork used educationally. By this system, which has been carried to great perfection in Sweden, the children in the public schools are taught to be handy with tools from the age of 9 or 10 years. It is simply preparatory, training the hand and eye for higher forms of skilled labor to be taught later in technical schools, which are the natural outgrowth of the system. Manuel training schools are general in Germany, and they abound, also, in Austria, Belgium, Switzerland and to a less extent in England. France leads all other countries in popularizing industrial education, but it is being extended everywhere in Europe. There is no valid reason why it should not be found as desirable a system here as there, and at any rate the time has come when there must be greater provision made for the industrial education of American youth in order that they may be self-sustaining and enjoy a larger measure of independence than is possible in the precarious and poorly paid employments into which so large a proportion of them now drift.

The expediency of making manuel training a part of the public school system is widely approved, though there are some who object to it. Those who advocate it, however, have an advantage in the fact that wherever it has been introduced it has worked well—not everywhere with equal merit, but nowhere without sufficient success to justify its continuance. Whatever danger there may be in the possibility of the training being carried beyond legitimate limitations as a part of public school instruction, but this does not present an insurmountable difficulty and ought not to be permitted to stand as an obstacle to the extension of the principle.

It Never Fails. "Do you see that gentleman sitting opposite?" said one man in a cable car to his next neighbor.

"Yes."

"I can make him pull his watch out of his pocket and consult the time, without saying a word to him?"

"You know him, perhaps, and have it arranged that he shall do so on a certain signal from you?"

"No; I never saw him before in my life."

"Well, then, I don't believe you can do it."

"I have $5 to say I can."

"I have five to say you can't."

"It's a bet, is it?"

"It is."

The other man waited a few moments until the glance of the man referred to fell on him, and then with much deliberation, drew forth his watch and looked at it.

The man across the aisle saw the movement, and instantly lifted his own watch from his vest pocket.

"The man who had bet he wouldn't hand his $5 bill over without a word, and as the other took it he remarked:

"It never fails. Look at your own watch and it's as catching as yawning. Try it yourself on somebody."

Elizabethan "Cookery." If they were as good as our ancestors thought why do we have chow-chow more; or marmalades, keftons, vaunts, frians, moyses, pettie services, tansies, manchers, Florentines, resbons, and condonacks? "Spinnedge tarts" we are quite willing to do without; and we can run our nineteenth century course entirely independent of "black pudding," made of blood. "Pettie services" were "coffins" filled with eggs, marrow, ginger, sugar, and currants. A Florentine was a plate of veal, kidney, chicken, or pheasant, "which of them you will," minced with suet, eggs, currants, dates, cinnamon, mace, ginger, and "time," and baked in a sweet crust. Our tastes are very different. Ginger is limited in its use now; we care not for saffron and do not cook dates with fish, flesh, or fowl; we are not given to the flavor of sandalwood in our dainties, and we have a taste in herbs not of the sixteenth century.—Chautauque.

Men always admire a woman whose husband is good to her.

One of the most remarkable productions of the Isles of Chile is the celebrated "barometer trees," which grow in great profusion in all the salt marshes. In dry weather the bark of this natural barometer is as smooth and white as that of a sycamore, but with the near approach of storms these characteristics vanish like magic and the bark turns black.

Taxidermist Martin Herzog of Tyrone, Pa., shipped to a circus at Washington a black snake measuring six feet four inches. Under the terms of his standing contract with this show Mr. Herzog receives fifty cents a foot for all the blacksnakes he can furnish them. A week ago he sent them a five-foot reptile.

In Olden Times. People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

A young poet recently achieved this wonderful line: "All at once a monotonous monotone burst upon his ear," which reminds us of another famous line, equally expressive: "The sweet toned darkness filled the air with scent."

"Cousin Edith, you can't send money in a letter." "Why, Bessie, whatever made you think that? I've sent it that way lots of times." "Well, I'm sure it's wrong because I've seen printed on the fences to 'post no bills.'"

IN GLASS. That's the way Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets come. And it's a more important point than you think. It keeps them always fresh and reliable, unlike the ordinary pills in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes.

They're put up in a better way, and they get in a better way, than the huge, old-fashioned pills. No grating, no violence, no reaction afterward that sometimes leaves you worse off than before.

In that way, they cure permanent Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, a compound of refined and concentrated vegetable extracts—the smallest in size, the easiest to take, and the cheapest pill you can buy for the greatest to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

There's nothing likely to be "just as good."

Mrs. Nancy Wirtz, 1201 Caroline St., Baltimore Md., thus gives her experience: "We have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and have never found its equal for our children."

The word quarantine comes from the Italian "quarantina." The Monkish of the late Latin term was applied by the Anglo-Saxons about Egbert's time. It was then the custom to compute periods of time by forties, and a vessel coming from a suspected or diseased port was prohibited any intercourse with shores for forty days. Others say that the Venetians first introduced the practice and the name.

"German Syrup" I must say a word as to the efficacy of German Syrup. I have used it in my family for Bronchitis, the result of Colds, with most excellent success. I have taken it myself for Throat Troubles, and have derived good results therefrom. I therefore recommend it to my neighbors as an excellent remedy in such cases. James T. Durette, Earlysville, Va. Beware of dealers who offer you "something just as good." Always insist on having Boschee's German Syrup.

COLUMBUS. Dr. Parkhurst, the New York clergyman, who achieved great notoriety by visiting the unsavory places in New York a few months ago, has now taken up the character of Columbus. He says that Columbus was a great liar, an avaricious, disagreeable, opinionated surly fellow, a pirate by profession and a bad lot generally. We very much fear that good Dr. Parkhurst has been studying the under crust of humanity in New York so long, that he has come to the conclusion, that this is a vile world and the inmates are rascals. When a man reaches this conclusion in regard to his fellowmen, there is only one excuse, either he has a bad heart, or he is a victim of dyspepsia. If Dr. Parkhurst will take the Laxative Gum Drops every night before he retires, his system will be entirely purged from humors that now impede the free action of his digestive organs. These gum drops contain nothing deleterious. They are put up in two sizes. Small size sells for ten cents, the large size for 25 cents. Get them of any dealer. SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill.

JOHN WANAMAKER, Postmaster-General of the United States, Is usually considered, and rightly so, one of the brightest business men in America, and when he writes to the Editor of ARTHUR'S NEW HOME MAGAZINE as follows:

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL, WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 17, 1892.

MY DEAR MR. REED: As your Magazine gets thicker, it gets brighter. Like the big wood fire on the hearth in my library when I pile more logs on, I knew Mr. Arthur very well from way back, but I doubt if he would know his old monthly since you've put out the dead wood, and put in so many more pages and departments, and taken on so many young and sparkling writers.

If you keep on giving such good pictures you'll have 200,000 subscribers. I fear advertisers will crowd you (for some things can be well advertised in magazines), but don't drop any of the reading pages, and don't let a dry or dull line creep in.

Don't raise the price either, if you can help it, even if it is half the price of other no-better magazines. I congratulate you on doing what no one else has done in putting out two copies at the price that others charge for one. The old homestead and the young daughters' new home can each have your Magazine without paying more than others charge for single copies of their publications.

Your old friend, JOHN WANAMAKER.

It should indicate to the average American citizen that under the new management it is at least awake, and when we know that they have more than TREBLED their circulation within the year, and that among the very best people of the land, we may admit, without further argument, it has been the journalistic success of 1892.—"Building Business," Boston.

MALTED OILINE.

The Grandest Remedy on Earth

For all invalids or those in failing health, coughs, colds, consumption, asthma, bronchitis, loss of muscular power, appetite, and general debility. Malted Oiline is a positive cure. Malted Oiline is not a patent medicine but a concentrated, life-giving food as evidenced by the fact that it actually restores (whether old or young) the most emaciated to their original condition.

Dr. F. A. Hodgkinson of the Manchester Royal Hospital for consumption, says, that if the properties of Malted Oiline were known it would be kept in every household, as it is the most reliable remedy in existence.

An eminent New York physician writes, "If people knew what Malted Oiline could do, the occupation of half the medical profession would be gone."

In standard use by nearly all the principal hospitals in America and Europe. $1.00 per bottle, to be had of leading drug stores, or mailed free on receipt of the price. ELGIN CHEMICAL CO., Elgin, Ill.
