The indications are that no tariff bill will be passed by the present congress. The president and the house are determined that nothing but the bill passed by the house shall be made a law and the senate takes a very decided position in favor of the amendments made to it. The prospects seem good for a deadlock.

Col. W. L. Green does not propos that Kem shall have the pop nomination for congress, even if he has to take it himself. And in the event that the latter contingency fails to connert, he proposes that Judge Holcomb shall have the nomination. All of which suggests that Holcomb is liable to get into trouble. It is proposed to keep him on the bench. make a supreme judge of him, nomanate him for congress, elect him for governor and transplant him to the United States senate. Just how this is all going to be done without cutting him up into little pieces and utilizing the parts separately is what the Hab wants to know-Kearney Hub.

The meeting of the legislative committee of the Northwest Nebraska Irrigition Association at Harrison on Tuesday is the beginning of a move of great importance to the people of this and other western counties of the state. During the past year a number of organizations have been made for the advancement of the irrigation interests of the state, but the Northwest organization is the pioneer in the work of legislation and therefore takes the lead. The condition in the eastern part of the state has brought the people of that locality to realize that they too are interested in the matter and it behooves them to get arrangements made which will make a total crop failure from lack of moisture impossible. In order to encourage the investment of capital in irrigation works legislation must be had which will give the investor some protection. Now is the time and the extreme northwest association has set the ball in motion which will roll until the needed law is made. The committee who have the matter in charge are men of standing. ability and energy and it only needs the hearty co-operation of all who are interested in the prosperity of the state to carry the work to success. If each locality goes to work independently to secure the laws needed by it the legislature will be flooded with bills on the subject of irrigation and the probable result would be but little good law on reach. What is the next thing to be done? Rather, what is the first thing to be done? Colorado has accomplished wonders along the sides of the mountain; barren rugged patches here and there have been made as fruitful as Eden of old, though it required from three to five times the outlay it would require here in Nebraska to secure ten times as many acres as the same amount of water could be made to irrigate in Colorado. Why delay this matter longer? Why not the press, public men, political, soal, religious, all organizations of men and women agitate this question? It is guesser, purely a social question. When approached in a scientific and business manner it will appear easy of solution. Experiments in several counties of the state already show the wisdom and easy means at hand to secure the most excellent results. The parched condition of large sections of the state at this time and the same condition in many of the same counties last year and two years ago phophesy for the future as to just what we may expect, while the abandonment of portions already settled by sturdy farmers emphasize the necessity of grapping with the cold fact that omething must be done, and that irri gation is the means, the hope of all loyal citizens of this commonwealth if Nebraska should support her share of the world's population and grow in wealth with her sister states. We have no coal, no ores, and little else of mineral reource, so far as we now know of, hence the necessity of making the most of our agricultural resources. A little less politics, a great deal less talk on the fool silver question and more, infinitely more norse-sense discussion of the irrigation question and Nebraska will blossom as the rose.

The present campaign is of unusual interest to Nebraskans. Not only will a full set of state officers be elected, but a legislature will be elected that will choose a United States senator. The
