STORYETTES.

THE SON OF HIS FATHER.

I shall have to make a lawyer out of that boy of mine. I don't see any other way out of it, declared a well known lawyer with a laugh. He came into my office the other day on his way home from school and laid a dime on the desk before me.

"What is this for, son?" I asked.
"Retainer," he answered soberly.
"Very well," said I, entering into the joke. "What have I been retained upon?"

My boy dug down into his pocket and produced a note from his teacher and placed it before me without comment. It was to the effect that he had been 'cutting up' and advised a whipping.

"Now, what would you advise?" asked he in a business-like voice after I had read the note and saw the trap that the young rascal had led me into.

"I think that our first move should be to apply for a change of venue," said I.

"Very well," he answered, "you're handling the case."
"Then, will you turn the note over to your mother," said I.

I saw the young imp's face fall at this, but he braced up and said:
"See here, dad, you're bound to see me through on this, 'cause you've accepted my retainer, you know."
"I'll argue your case before the court," I answered, "but you will have to accept the decision. I would not dare attempt to influence the court."

Well, I pleaded the boy's case, had it promptly thrown out of court, and the boy got what he deserved—a good whipping.

It was the first time I ever played false to a client.

KANSAS CITY GIRL AND A TOO-FRESH FRENCH YOUTH.

A funny story is told in Paris of a Kansas City girl who was studying art. It happened several years ago, but has not lost interest even now in the Latin quarter. For some occult reason of inexplicable whim the masculine students disapproved of sailor hats worn by the English and American artists, and made themselves generally obnoxious by rude comments.

One day the Kansas City girl was going to her little room from the atelier where she studied. In one hand she carried a portfolio, in the other a tight rolled umbrella. After a time she was followed by a sallow youth, whom she recognized as a poet and a leader in the warfare upon sailor hats.

He followed her, block after block, loudly expressing his disapproval of the hat beyond endurance, especially as his objections took the form of a paper and broad balls thrown at the offending chapeau. Turning suddenly, but calmly, in front of a large safe, she asked sweetly:

"Am I to understand that you desire me to remove my hat, Monsieur?"
The poet, long and lank of hair and lean of aspect, answered unhesitatingly:

"At once, Mademoiselle!"
"In America," said Mademoiselle, generally, "gentlemen always remove their own hats in making a request of the ladies. Allow me." And a well directed blow of the tightly rolled umbrella sent the poet's cherished stik flat spinning into the boulevard under the feet of horses and wheels of carriages.

He stood paralyzed, and the crowd at the tables broke into loud applause, while the girl escaped safely down a side street.

Sailor hats can now be worn with perfect impunity by the girl art students.

SHE CERTAINLY DID BETTER.

"There are more ways than one to make a living," said a demure little woman with flashing black eyes the other day. "I know a woman who was left penniless. She was struck with the silliness of certain kinds of advertisements that are posted up. She thought that she could write good advertisements, and she thought out a lot of little schemes for a certain article, she submitted them to the advertising manager of the firm and they were accepted, and now she is making a deal of money every year with her verses extolling certain wares."

"Phaw!" said the blonde, who was with the demure little woman, "I know of a case here that discounts that." "I don't believe it," said the demure little woman.

"Well, I do, and I'll tell you about it. A friend of mine who had been doing some newspaper work got the craze for writing advertisements, and she went round to a lot of places only to find that they were well supplied with people to look after that branch of their business. She did find one firm that was willing to let her try her hand, and she began work. In less than a year she was comfortably well off for the rest of her life."

"Did she invent some new style of writing, or something of that kind?" asked the demure little woman.
"No," replied the blonde, "she didn't; but she did better—she married the senior partner."

OUR FUNNY MAN ON BABIES.

Babies are usually young. Now and again specimens may be found of twenty years and over. Real, live, unmistakable, heard-a-mile-off babies are always young.

Babies have features. With a good microscope you can see a baby's nose. It has a high forehead—one that goes right over to the back of its neck. A baby's ears are put on for amusement, chiefly to relieve its great expanse of cheek. The places where its eyebrows ought to be are there, but the eyebrows have not arrived, which gives rise to a suspicion that babies are bare-faced creatures.

A baby has eyes, which eyes it chiefly uses to express astonishment—evoked, no doubt, by the antics and language of those about it. It has a mouth, too, which it keeps for putting its hands and feet into, together with keys, pencils, coins, pieces of coal, and other odds and ends it may find lying about.

A baby's mouth is by far the most useful of its possessions. Babies wear clothes. The chief object aimed at in dressing a baby is to lose the baby among the clothes. If you have a foot and a half or two feet of baby, you will require from forty fifty yards of clothes to dress it properly. The reason for this is that every baby is the best baby that was ever born, and the fact must be emphasized. Besides, somebody might wish to steal it, and in such a case, the longer he had to look for it, the greater would be the chance of catching him.

HOW HE FELT ABOUT IT.

"Of course," remarked the proud father of six children, "there is nothing in all the world that makes a man so sincerely happy as to have around him a whole household of roystering children, every one of them tickled plumb to death when he comes home at night, and every one of them wanting to climb all over him at one and the same time. Still, it is possible that there may be an embarrassment of riches, as the French say, of even this sort, and when a baby is of the squalling kind he sometimes thinks he would almost commit a crime for the sake of five or six minutes of peace and quiet. A friend of mine, who lives in a flat, is the father of a regular four-time squaller, and there was an incident at his home the other evening that has caused his wife to look upon him with suspicion.

Albert is one of the mildest-mannered men that ever lived. Across the hall from his flat live two bachelor friends of his, and you know bachelors are not overly partial to babies with unstrained lungs. The other afternoon his wife came in where he was reading, or trying to, and she was considerably wrought up.

"I've got no use for those two friends of yours across the hall," she said.
"Why not, my dear?" he responded in his usual mild manner.
"Because, when Willie was crying awhile ago, one of them said, 'Oh, shoot the baby!'"

"Oh, did he?" said the father, raising his eyebrows, after the manner of some people expressing surprise or resentment or some other emotion.
"Yes, he did," repeated the fond mother.

"And what did you say to that?" he inquired with a half smile.
"What could I say?" she asked, the anger showing in her face.
"Really, I don't know, my dear," he hesitated, but I thought possibly you might have said 'rubber didn't have any gun.'"

"She couldn't say a word; she didn't try to. She just looked at him in speechless astonishment and went out of the room."

A PIPE AND DOG STORY.

A story is told in England of a certain well known nobleman who entered a smoking compartment of a Caledonian train, and was followed shortly by an elderly lady who carried a small and abstrusely dog.

"This is a smoking compartment," he politely said.
"It is not," the old lady answered with asperity.
"I beg your pardon," persisted the gentleman, pointing to the legend on the window.
"I don't care," she retorted. "At any rate I never allow any one to smoke in my presence."

Sir T— shrugged his shoulders, and by-and-by produced a favorite pipe, of an ornate and expensive make, and commenced to smoke. A moment later the lady's dog snatched the pipe from him, and lunged it far out of the carriage. Quick as thought—he is not an Irishman for nothing—he snatched the pipe, lifted the pet dog, and hurried it after the pipe. The lady raved and the knight snaked shamefacedly until the next station, when the owner of the missing pipe in charge.

"I don't care," she retorted. "At any rate I never allow any one to smoke in my presence."

A HAPPY ENDING.

A boy about 10 years old came into the Central police station in a Kansas city, leading a fine shepherd dog by a piece of rope. The boy's face was red and he was crying. A big policeman kindly asked what was the matter. It was quite a time before the boy could stammer out enough to reply. "My mother," he sobbed, "is too poor to pay for a license for Shep, and I brought him here to have you kill him."

Then he broke out with another wail as if his heart was breaking. The policeman looked motionless, looking longingly at his young master. A policeman blew his nose very loudly, the desk sergeant walked out into the hall, while the captain remembered that he must telephone someone. That was all. He had led the boy to the door, and putting him on the head, said gently:

"There, little fellow, don't cry any more; run home with your dog. I wouldn't kill Shep for a thousand dollars."

The boy shed tears of joy now, and ran off with Shep barking and bounding at his side, and it was hard to tell which was the happiest.

IN A TINY CRAFT ACROSS THE SEA.

In a craft that was built for navigation of sheltered waters, Captain Peter Johansen, married, and his 12-year-old son Peter have braved the dangers of the Atlantic. Their little boat came bodily into the harbor of Punta Gorda, Fla., fifty-nine days out from Gibraltar. The captain and his son are heroes.

The vessel was built for navigation of sheltered waters, and was carried away and all the sails destroyed. He had to take the vessel into port for repairs.

On his return voyage to Liverpool the captain picked up at sea a vessel that had been abandoned. The ship listed heavily, and he found when he went on board that a heavy cargo of ore it carried had shifted. How the craft had weathered a storm in such condition he could not explain.

A crew from the Senator went aboard the abandoned vessel and righted the cargo, and the Senator then towed it to Gibraltar. After litigation in the British admiralty courts the prize and cargo were sold, and Captain Johansen realized a large profit from his find. He returned to his home in Punta Gorda in a manner that would astonish his neighbors.

He purchased a boat 20 feet long, with 7 feet 6 inches beam. Into this he and his son loaded 100 gallons of water and food for 20 days and set sail. They were way of the Canaries, the north of Santa Domingo, Porto Rico and Cuba and landed only at Boca Grande.

RUPTURE.

You Pay Nothing Until Cured.

Facts Stated by My Former Patients.

If You Are Afflicted With Rupture Don't Fail to Read them.

My Guarantee is Valuable Because You do Not Pay Me One Cent Until You Are Well.

I present to the readers of this paper a few testimonial letters and names of former patients whom I have cured of rupture, believing that the afflicted would rather correspond with some one who has been cured than read what I might say about myself. They can more fully investigate and convince themselves as to the merits of my treatment.

I could use this entire space singing my own praises, but believe the statements of those I have cured will be more satisfactory to the afflicted. I will ask you to write to any or all of them. If you are satisfied with what they say about my reliability and methods of treatment, write to me or call and see me. Remember that in all cases I guarantee a cure and do not accept one cent of money until you are well. Consultation by mail or in person is entirely free. I will be pleased to correspond with you regarding your case.

Ernest Henderson, Kansas, June 8, 1899.
Dear Doctor—I want to add my testimonial letter to your already large list, hoping to be of use to other sufferers. I had a bad case of rupture for years and was cured in three weeks. I cannot say too much for the doctor. He did not ask me a cent of pay until the patient is well. This is the only guarantee he can possibly give to any person afflicted as I was. I will answer anyone who wishes to know more about my case. Very truly yours,
