LORD KITCHENER'S WAY.

An English Commander Who Always Keeps Mis Affairs to Himself. No man ever kept his ows counsel better than Lord Kitchener, when fighting was afoot. There was never any leakage of information because there was never any information to leak. So writes a staff officer in his it woll. This probably explains it. account of "Campaigning with Kitchener" in Blackwood's. He gives an instance of the great general's careful-

Once when the enemy threatened our ine of communications 1 expressed were laid, for all the world to see, as a ground-line along the desert, glistening in the sun and bearing a meaning even to a dervish, which is saying good deal. Kitchener told me to ride down to the river bank and say if I felt happler. Down I went, and after dillgent scarch discovered a second wire cunningly laid under the bush and sedges.

As I was about to ride back I saw a steamer pushing off, and asked the young engineer officer what he was about. It turned out that he had personal instructions from Kitchener to lay a third wire of telegraph on the other bank of the Nile, and no one in the army but the chief and this young officer had wind of the matter. From an instinct of self-preservation nobody ever slept with more than one eye shut when Kitchener was with the army. A sound sleeper was always in danger of finding himself alone in the desert, and the army gone. This actcally happened to a worthy officer who was rather hard of hearing. Some me whispered, "Dervishes," and the army marched softly away without beat of drum in the usual half hour or less. The officer awoke, nothing living in sight except two bald-hended val-Dires.

Kitchener's officers took their cue from their chief, and imitated his methods. Once a general officer was inspe-ting a post on the line of communications, and duly arrived at the little hus which represented the headquarters of the majesty of the army in some wind-swept hole. Enter X., who, looking round, spics an office-table and two trays, one-full of papers. The empty one was ticketed, "Business," the other "Bosh."

"Excellent officer!" purrs E. "Thor oughly understands his work and Kitchener's methods." But when he went further, and proceeded to examine the papers in the "Bosh" tray, he found that the documents consisted exclusively of his own voluminous orders and memoranda.

SUMMER IN ALASKA.

Tropical Growth of Vegetation When the Sun Climbs Northward. To undertake to give people a correct conception of Arctic America, or of any part of it, is difficult. 14th St., N.Y. City, adds her testimony to the hundreds of thousands on Mrs. Pinkham's files.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's Remodies were first introduced skeptics all over the country frowned upon their curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by the new discovery has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands, doubts and hundreds of thomands, doubts and skepticisms have been swept away as by a mighty flood, until to-day the great good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her other medicines are doing among the women of America is attracting the attention of many of our leading scientists, physicians and thinking people. Merit alone could win such fame; wise, therefore, is the woman who for a cure relies upon Lydia E. Pinkham'sVegetableCompound.
