A. F. Morgan's Dream in Boyhood. "The dream of my boyhood days," observed J. Pierpont Morgan to a friend recently, "was to be a farmer and have the finest stock in the world—the dolce far niente of the farmer's life was my fancy." "Well, you have your farm and your stock—to say nothing of stocks," retorted the friend. "Well, but I am the man of all work, and I haven't got the dolce far niente; and can't buy it either, big a price as I might be willing to pay for it."—New York Times.

Mrs. Mollie Allen, of South Fork, Ky., says she has prevented attacks of cholera morbus by taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets when she felt an attack coming on. Such attacks are usually caused by indigestion and these Tablets are just what is needed to cleanse the stomach and ward off the approaching attack. Attacks of bilious colic may be prevented in the same way. For sale by All Druggists.

Vigorous at Eighty-seven. The venerable Parks Godwin has been celebrating his eighty-seventh birthday and he appears to be in a sufficiently vigorous and healthy state of mind and body to enable him to enjoy the festivities and to appreciate the congratulations.

A Strange Bequest. By the will of William Lysaght of Monroe, Wis., Frank Mackey, a farm hand, receives a bequest of a farm worth $25,000 on condition that he shall keep testator's widow's carriage clean and supply her with fresh milk during the remainder of her life.

St. Anthony and Pigs. St. Anthony is the patron and protector of pigs, and Stow, in his "Survey," mentions a curious custom prevalent in his time in the London markets, which has left its mark in a proverb. The officers of the markets slit the ears of starved pigs and those unwholesome for food; around the necks of these the proctors of St. Anthony's hospital tied bells, and set them loose upon the refuse heaps. It became the habit of people to feed those pigs, and the animals, acquiring a knowledge of their benefactors, would follow them like a dog, whining for food. Hence the saying, "He follows me about like an Anthony pig" or "He is a Tantom pig," applied to a whining beggar or mere hanger-on.

NOT SAFE FOR ANGELS. Little Jack Knew There Was Danger in Such Work.

The woman with the enameled tea cup sipped and told this story. She said the incident happened in Brooklyn.

"A little boy stood at the window watching the snow falling upon the pavement and blowing together into dusty patches. 'Aunt,' he said, 'do the angels need the snow?'"

"Yes, dear," said aunt, without looking up from her book.

"There was silence for a while. From out the house across the way a white-capped maid came with a broom and swept the sidewalk and the steps. She was the maid of Mrs. S., a very fastidious, fussy old lady, who had a strong dislike for children and dirt. Indeed, she seemed to regard the words as synonymous. Only that day she had sent little Jack and his chums away from her side of the street.

"Jack watched the maid for awhile," continued the narrator, according to the New York Times, "then he started his aunt with this statement:

"Well, then I'd pity the angels if Mrs. S. catches them putting snow on her steps!"

HE LOST HIS STRAP.

Anecdote of the Boyhood Days of Milwaukee's Mayor.

"As a schoolboy that man was notorious all over Walworth county for his utter disregard of his personal appearance," remarked James G. Monahan of Darlington in the Hotel Pfister yesterday, as Mayor David S. Rose, a paragon of neatness crossed the lobby. "Mrs. Montgomery, a daughter of the late B. A. Gray of Omaha, was a schoolmate of Mr. Rose, and she told me the following story about him:

"It was Friday afternoon, and the boys in the little cross-roads school had to speak pieces and the girls write compositions. David was one of the unfortunates. He appeared in heavy kip boots, red as sole leather from a lack of blacking and elbow grease. He usually had a piece of rope tied about his waist, but this day this piece of personal ornamentation was lacking.

"David Rose!" called the petite school teacher, her face all smiles as David, with agony marking his features, took his place on the platform. "Take your hands out of your pockets!" exclaimed the teacher as David stood facing the school, with both hands thrust in his trousers pockets.

"David took one hand out of a pocket and made his bow.

"Take the other hand out of your pocket!" she cried.

"David's face flushed scarlet as he replied: "Please Miss B—, I left my rope at home!"

"The school was convulsed with laughter, and David was permitted to speak his piece with one hand in his trousers pocket."—Milwaukee Sentinel.
