We wish to correct an error that appeared in the Glen Roundups of last week. In the item of those that were entertained should have read those that entertained. We want our correspondents to always call our attention to any material mistakes that may appear in their items for errors are easily made and sometimes somebody's feelings are hurt when it was not intended that way.—Ed.

Charles Newman came in on Wednesday's train from Detroit, Michigan where he was called some time ago to the bedside of his father who is quite sick. Charlie says his father was some better when he left but is impossible for him to get well. His father presented him with his spectacles which is an heirloom that has been in the family for over 300 years. The strange part of them: they were made by a black smith for his great grand father 300 years ago.

A young man by the name of Roy Muldoon of Haron, S. Dakota, says the daily World Herald of Dec. 2, was ruined by cigarettes, and was sent to the insane asylum. We wonder sometimes why young men will poison their systems with the deadly cigarette, when it is just merely a question of time until they will have to succumb, either by losing their minds or life. Others should institute a warfare against not only the cigarette but the men that furnish them to our boys. But then, how often do we see a father setting this very example before his boys. Our government demands too word poison to be stamped upon all poison except cigarettes. Of our young men that were unfit for army service in the late war with Spain, 80 per cent of those rejected was on account of their cigarette smoking, thereby impairing their health to such an extent that they could not be admitted to the service. This should be enough to open the eyes of all fathers as well as the young men. What are we going to do about it?

If there is any one thing the standard admires more than another it is the moral, well behaved, industrious young man. In the town of Rushville there are three brothers, all living at home with their parents. We have often noticed these young men, and could not help but comment on their cleanliness and industry. When about the home they are always busy fixing up about the place. They keep the yard fence in repair, attend the lawn, keep the buildings well painted, set out trees and shrubbery and keep every thing in its place. They do not have to be driven to these things nor be told to do them. They do it cheerfully and because they are neat and industrious. They would rather do it than to run the streets and listen to snuffy cars and join the roudies in destroying property. As far as we know neither of them pollute their systems with intoxicants nor use tobacco. We have never heard either of them swear nor use obscene language. They are not stuck up nor pride themselves on their moralities. In fact we doubt if they take any thought in it; it comes natural to them. They cannot help but make good citizens and men who can be trusted in places of trust.—Rushville Standard.

All of our towns have young men but can it be said of them as the Rushville Standard speaks of these young men o Rushville, it is not beyond the reach of all young men to have such said for them. The world takes us for just what we think we are, and young men don't you will ever reach any higher standard, than that what you use as.
