Mr. Olney to Mr. Bull. NEW YORK, Oct. 26.-A special to the Herald from Washington says that additional particulars have just been ascertained concerning the contents of Secretary Olnev's note to Great Britain on the Venezuelan matter. It is a communication of about 8,000 words and contains a full review of the efforts which the United States has repeatedly made to secure a setbetween Great Britain and Venezuela. It describes the history of the Monroe doctrine, points out the applicability of this doctrine to the boundary dispute, and then declares the principle, whileh is the vital part of the note and the great principle for which the United States is now contendingnamely, that no European power shall enlarge its territorial dominion on the American continent by means of force. From this basis Secretary Olney proceeds to declare that arbitration obviously the only just method by which Great Britain can hope to reach a settlement of her dispute with Venezuela. Such arbitration, he says, the United States is now, as formerly, willing to promote and facilitate. But he is as emphatic as language permits in the declaration that any attempt to reach a settlement of the contention

by means of force would be regarded as an act unfriendly to the United

Secretary Olney is careful to point out in this note that the United States has no opinion to offer concerning the merits of Great Britain's dispute with Venezuela So far as the United States knows, either party to the contention may be in the right. But he reviews the history of the territorial misunderstanding between Venezuela on the one side and Great Britain on the other in order to show most conclusively that doubts do exist as to the right of either disputant; that Great Britain has at various times herself admitted the existence of the doubt, arising through a series of complications, imperfect descriptions and indefinite treaties. He establishes, as it appears, beyond contravention, that the dispute is of that character where no absolute right nor clearness of title exists with either party, and that the quarrel is essentially one of those misunderstandings between nations which, by innumerable international precedents, are properly to be adjusted by means of arbitration.

Having thus effectually estopped any possible plea that the territory in question is indisputably English soil and therefore coming within that rule that no nation can submit to arbitration as to title to its own territory, Secretary Olney again declares that the Monroe doctrine, the United States has a right to a voice in the settlement of this matter, and that his voice is raised to urge that the dispute be settled by arbitration.

The Secretary takes the ground that arbitration may confirm Great Britain's jurisdiction over all the disputed territory. If this should be the finding of the tribunal, the United States would henceforth respect that decision; but he holds, that until Great Britain's title shall have been passed upon by such tribunal, the United States is and will continue to be a party to the question.

Ten or cleven weeks have now elapsed since this important communication was placed in the hands of the British government, and no other response has been received than a formal acknowledgement. The officials would very much like to have a reply before Congress convenes, but they are by no means sanguine that their wishes will be complied with. In any case, the probabilities are that the President will officially make known the contents of Secretary Olney's note in his

it Will be Firm and Encompromising Our Government Not Seeking a Quarrel With England, but Determined to Prevent the Extension of European Dominton on This Hemisphere Under mny Guise-Views of Senator Cullom.

The Monroe Doctrine.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.-While it is absolutely true that for the first time in many years work at the navy yard and gun factories goes on night and day and that the successive notes on the Venezuelan affair have brought that controversy to a stage where England must assent or dissent to the Monroe doctrine, with hostilities in the latter event, there is no basis whatsoever for attributing to the administration the purpose to seek a quarret for the quarrel's sake as a domestic political expedient and there is not in the existing situation the least suggestion of theatrical display. There is a firm, well considered determination to prevent the extension of European dominion on this hemisphere under any guise, though the petty turbulences of the sub-tropic regions will not be regarded by the United States.

Diplomatic circles are growing some what skeptical respecting the correctness of the London dispatches which announces that the ultimatum has been sent by Lord Salisbury to It is shown in the case in point that, although the arrest of colonial officers at Uruan occurred November last, no official cognivance of the matter was taken by Great Britain until recently. Under these circumstances the probability of an ultimatum being suddenly sprung is seriously doubted, though it is not questioned that Lord Salisbury has sent a communication to the Caracas government directing their attention to the arrest of Sergeant Behrens and asking for an explanation. If the Venezuelan expianation should not be satisfactory, then, it is said, Great Britain might, with propriety, respond with an ultimatum.

Senator Cullom said last night just before his departure for Illinois There is no question about the sentiment in Congress being in favor of the upholding of the Monroe doctrine. I suppose the doctrine will be de clared in some more or less formal manner by Congress, and if the situation demands that anything be done to enforce its observ-ance, Congress, I think, can be relied upon to act promptly. Great Britain does not seem to care very much for our opinion or our wishes and we must maintain our own dig-nity and uphold our own rights. It looks as if most of the foreign powers had begun to feel that the United had begun to feel that the States was getting too powerful to maintain the old attitude of indifference toward the affairs of the world, and as if they saw in our increasing strength some imagined danger to themselves. They seem to be bridling up and displaying a disposition to press us back, forestalling any possible aggressiveness on our part.

Fred R. Coudert acted as chairman, and with a few complimentary remarks introduced Senator Hill.

The Senator declared that the principles of the Democratic party were so plain and explicit that they do not need to be avoided. We have dodged nothing in the campaign and we are attempting to deceive no one. If we are right we want to win, and if we are wrong we deserve defeat.

On the tariff bill enacted in 1894 by the Democratic party he said: been in operation only a little over That time has not been ample to demonstrate its value and usefulness. It is to be regretted that it has not met the full expectations of its friends in realizing sufficient revenue to prevent deficiencies, but consolation exists, that even if there must be some deficiencies for a brief period, there has been no unnecessary extravagant taxation imposed under its provisions. Sufficient time has not elapsed to determine accurately whether its reduction were all wise or justifiable, but it is believed in the end it will result in damages.

The presidential party spent the morning quietly at the Aragon until It o'clock when they were driven rapidly to the exposition grounds without any parade whatever. Inside the gates the military was already gathered.

After the review the president was introduced by President Collier of the exposition company. President Cleveland's appearance at the front of the stand was the signal for an outburst of applause from the multitude. He and for my co-laborers in the execu-tive branch of our government who have accompanied me, I thank you for your kind words of greeting. We are your kind words of greeting. here to congratulate you and your as sociates upon the splendid success of the exposition you have set on foot and upon the evidences you have gathered, chiefly illustrative of Southern enterprise, Southern industry and Southern recuperation But we are also here to claim a share in the pride of your achievement. No portion of countrymen, wherever our can exclusively appropriate the glory arising from these surroundings. They are proofs of American genius and industry which are the joint possession of all our ople, and they represent triumphs American skill and ingenuity in which all our citizens, from the highest to the humblest, have a proprietary right. While my fellow citizens of Georgia and her neighboring states may felicitate themselves to the fullest extent upon such evidences as are here found of the growth and prosperity of the interests and enterprises in which they are especially concerned, I can-not be deprived of the enjoyment afforded by the reflection that the work they have done emphasizes in the sight of the world the immense resources and indomitable thrift of the people of the United States. "It seems to me the thought may be suggested as not inappropriate to this occasion, that what we see about us is an outgrowth of another exposition inaugurated on American soil more than a century ago, when a new nation was exhibited to the civilized world, guaranteed and protected by a constitution which was ordained and established by the people of the United States, with the declared purpose of promoting their general welfare and securing the blessings of liberty to themselves and their posterity.

"The success which has attended the exposition of products and manufacturers is not altogether due to the quality of the soil or character of the people in any of the contributing states, but it rests largely upon the fact that these states are members of beneficiently governed whose natural resources and advantages everywhere have been developed and improved by the influence of free institutions, and whose people have been stimulated personal liberty. A contemplation of the benefits vouchsafed to us by our government easily reminds us of the importance of a hearty and united operation in their support and protection. We should lovingly watch and guard it, not only because recipients of its precious gifts, but for its own sake, and because it has been put into our hands in sacred keeping, to prove to the world that man can be trusted with self government.

"We shall walk in the path of patriotic duty, if remembering that our free institutions were established to funds of Mr. Carlisle, the cash-promote the general welfare, we strive ier. The robber had some diffor those things which benefit all our people, and each of us is content to his belt and Carlisle can out the side receive from a common fund his share the prosperity thus contributed. We shall miss our duty and forfeit our heritage if, in narrow selfishness, we are heedless of the general welfare and struggle to wrest from the Government private advantages which can only be gained at the expense of our fellow countrymen.

"I hope I may therefore be permitted in conclusion to suggest as a most important lesson taught by this occasion, the absolute necessity to our national health and welfare, and consequently to our individual happiness citizens of a careful discrimination in our support of policies and in our advocacy of political doctrines be-tween those which prompt the promotion of the public welfare and those which seem to simply serve selfish interests. If we to enjoy the blessings our government was framed to fairly and justly bestow, we shall secure them in due cultivating a spirit of broad American brotherhood and insisting upon such conduct as will, within the spirit of golden rule, promote the general

AN IMPORTANT RULING.

The Government's Responsibility for the Delivery of Postal Matter.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 24.-Judge Adams of the Federal Court made a ruling here yesterday in regard to the Government's jurisdiction over postal matter that is of much importance. Charles Dorton, a negro employed by Warden Pace at the penitentiary to do odd jobs and carry the United States mail to and from the prison, was in-dicted for rifling letters of valuables, such as money, postal notes, stamps, After testimony for the Government had been introduced, the attorneys for the negro demurred on the ground that Dorton was an agent and as the government delivered the letters into his hands its jurisdiction ended, in other words that after an agent has received mail property, the government cannot follow him up and e that it is delivered to the person addressed. The court sustained this demurrer and the negro was dis-charged. This is an entirely new ruland encouraged by the blessings of ing in this division of the Federal courts, although not without dent elsewhere.
