

Periodical Sick Headaches.

Of Interest to Women. Because in This Case They Proceeded From an Allment Peculiar to the Sex.

From the Herald-Democrat, Huron, S. D.

A few years since, J. W. Kelley came to Huron, South Dakota, from Osceola, Iowa, and purchased an interest in the Huron City Mill, an immense structure, having a capacity of 200 barrels of flour per day. Soon after his arrival Mr. Kelley's family removed here and some months later they were joined by their son, Elmer and family, who had purchased an interest in the concern, and the firm became known as J. W. Kelley & Son. Since their arrival they have built up an immense trade for their patent roller flour, and ship many carloads every month to eastern and other markets.

When they came to Huron, Mrs. J. W. Kelley was in very delicate health and the change of climate and conditions seemed to benefit her. But the relief proved only temporary, however, for after a few months residence here she lapsed into the same infirm physical condition that had been her lot for then nearly twenty years. Her ailments were those peculiar to women, and which women alone can best understand.

In addition to these troubles Mrs. Kelley was a sufferer from a peculiar sick headache. This would come upon her at intervals of about two weeks, continuing for two, three or four days, much of the time compelling her to keep to her bed. Because of her affliction she was quite unable to do her household work, visit her neighbors or attend church. This worried her greatly, for she is a devout Christian and lives according to her profession. As Rev. B. H. Burt, pastor of the Congregational Church, to which Mrs. Kelley belongs, said of her one evening at the close of service:

"Mrs. Kelley is indeed a true mother in Israel; she is conscientious and earnest, faithful and devoted—a Christian in the truest sense of the term."

In replying to inquiries touching her case Mrs. Kelley said:

"I am sixty years of age, and was born in New York state, where I lived for fourteen years, then removed with my parents to Michigan, living there about the same number of years, then went to Iowa, remaining there till we came here four years ago or more. I have been troubled with weakness peculiar to my sex for the past twenty-five years. During that time my husband has expended a large amount of money feeling physicians and buying remedies, but I found little relief. Physicians told me the womb was badly diseased and no permanent relief could be afforded till the change of life had fully taken place. In this they, like myself, were disappointed. To add to my other troubles a headache, painfully sickening would come upon me about every two weeks. I became quite discouraged and for a time ceased doctoring almost entirely; I had lost faith in the science of medicine, both of the old school and new, and cared to expend no more money in that way."

"About a year ago my son read in some newspaper an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and urged me to try them. I hesitated because I had tried so many patent medicines without securing any much sought and long hoped for relief. But he insisted so strongly that I finally decided to give them a trial. Almost from the first I experienced relief, and after using the first box a change for the better was so apparent that I took courage and continued to use them strictly according to directions, until a short time since. I am so much better, as any one can see, that I have gradually discontinued their use. I take them now, but not regularly. I am a firm believer in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and have no hesitancy in recommending them to any who may be similarly afflicted as myself. What they have done for me they will do for others."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexion, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

WHITE TOPAZ.
Beautiful Stones to Be Seen at the Diamond Palace.

Every day in the week and every hour in the day one can see crowds around the show windows of THE CHICAGO DIAMOND PALACE. The cause of it all is the now widely known White Topaz. The White Topaz, or carbonated diamonds, have come to be recognized as the nearest thing on earth to genuine diamonds, so near indeed is it that the proprietors of the DIAMOND PALACE do not hesitate to place real diamonds in their windows amidst their display of White Topaz, and allow the public to pick them out at the selling price of the Topaz.

The latter stones have all the lovely brilliancy of the diamonds, sparkling steadily and with wonderful fire. The thousands of these stones in the windows forms one of the most gorgeous displays and has proven an attraction which is one of the features of Chicago.

In order to find out the advertising medium best suited to their business, this enterprising concern offers to send a genuine White Topaz to all those who will cut out and send them their advertisement, which appears elsewhere in this paper, together with 25c in stamps.

THE DIAMOND PALACE, like all successful institutions, has many imitators, who endeavor to sell cheap rhinestones and other pastes claiming they are topaz. We caution the public to be careful as THE DIAMOND PALACE, American Express Building, Chicago, are the sole importers of these stones.

CROSS OF THE LILIES.

YOU shall not go—I would rather see you dead at my feet."

"I shall go, father—some day." And so she went out of his life.

He was an old Puritan—grim, ascetic, dead to all pleasure and amusement. There were but three things for him: his Bible, his sword and his daughter. He had laid aside his sword, for he was growing old; but the Bible was always by him, and he loved to interpret it in his own harsh fashion. And then his daughter—but she had gone.

She was young and beautiful, pining for all that makes life sweet and grateful—for love, triumph, for the applause of thousands. She had resolved to be an actress and to have them all. She was stilled in that ugly, square house in Scotland. The dull unending moors overwhelmed her. The cold grey stones of her home crushed out all her life. She longed for the glare and glitter of some great city. So one day she disappeared, and James Gordon was left alone with his Bible.

He uttered no reproach, but his grim mouth seemed to close more firmly, while the lines grew deeper on his rugged face. The neighbors were disappointed at his apathy. They mentioned his daughter's name to him, in the hope of arousing some emotion or torrent of abuse. But he merely half rose from his chair and looked at them. They were silent, and left him. So a year passed away, and he began to grow weary of sky and moor. He sat all day in his oaken chair, with his hand on the Bible.

Meanwhile Ruth Gordon's name was on everyone's lips in London. Her beauty had brought her all she had ever dreamed, more than she could ever have hoped. It was the last night of the burlesque wherein she made herself famous. The house was crowded, and she excelled herself in every song and dance. At the close of the piece the stage was covered with bouquets from admirers—from men she knew and men who wished to be known to her. She stood amid a bank of flowers, and bowed to the thunders of applause. She was a queen, for that night at least.

Then, when the curtain had gone down for the last time, she picked up one or two of the offerings and went off to the dressing room. One she held in her hand had attracted her by its uncommon shape and condition. It was a half-faded cross of white lilies. She threw it contemptuously on her table, and pressed the other—the gift of a young Earl—to her lips.

"Who dared send me that shabby thing?" she said to her dresser, and then picked it up, from sheer curiosity, to see the name of the man who had ventured to offer it. She dropped it, and uttered a cry of surprise and pleasure, then picked it up again and kissed it passionately. The label read: "To my daughter. Come home. I am angry no more." Truly it was the happiest day of her life—a triumph and reconciliation.

She left for Scotland that night. How slowly the train crawled on through the darkness! She could not sleep, and she watched the lighted towns go by one by one until the dawn. Then the train dashed through the misty wilds of Cumberland, past streams and heather and moors, and at last she was in her own land, flying through the Scots Lowlands, thundering across the great Forth bridge, and its rival that spans the broad waters of the Tay. She drew near her home and the scenery became more familiar: every spot she passed was bright with memories of childhood. The train slowed down and stopped. She got out, left her luggage at the station, and walked towards her home.

In ten minutes she had reached the house. It looked more cold and grey than ever after the brilliance of London. She hammered at the door, waited for a minute or two, and then struck it again. Presently faint shuffling footsteps sounded in the hall, the door opened slowly, and Jeannie, the old servant, confronted her. She threw herself on the old woman's neck and kissed her withered cheeks.

"My father," she cried. "Is he well? O, I am so happy, Jeannie." And she tried to pass her, but the old woman stood in the way, the tears rolling down her face.

The girl shivered in her rich sables and stepped back.

"Jeannie, Jeannie, what is it? Let me by," she cried, and pushing her aside, she rushed into the dark dining room, where her father was wont to sit. The cushion chair was empty, but the Bible lay on the table—open at the book of Ruth. One passage was marked with a blue pencil. It was the verse beginning: "Rutrose me not to leave thee." The blue pencil had dropped to the floor.

Jeannie had followed her into the room with tottering steps.

"Where is my father, Jeannie? Does he not expect me?"

"Come away; he is not here."

"Not here?"

"He is not here, I tell ye," shrieked the old woman. "Come away," and clutching hold of the girl, she tried to drag her from the room.

Ruth shook off her feeble hold and turned upon her like a tigress.

"Where is he? What have you done to him?" she cried.

The old woman moaned to herself, then crawled to the window. There was a distant view of the kirkyard on the side of the purple hill. The setting sun fell on the white stones and they glittered like stars. She pointed her skinny finger in silence and then croaked: "Yonder, yonder, yonder."

The girl looked out, straining her eyes to see the beloved form. When the white stones flashed on her sight, the awful truth began to dawn on her.

"Yonder," she muttered, almost unconsciously. Then she broke into a wild laugh, and flung herself into a chair. She read the marked passage, and laughed again, still more wildly.

"So I killed him, Jeannie, I killed him, and he—how much did he pay you, Jeannie, to do this thing? All his wealth? It is well. It was not too much for a deed like this."

"Stay, Missie, stay," she whined, putting her fingers to her ears as she shut out the terrible voice. "Ye shall have it a'. I am auld, and the money—I couldna' help it."

"Keep it, it is accused. I would not touch it if I were starving. But the cross, woman, the cross, the cross of lilies?"

"It was his orders," she whimpered. "It was—O, the purr bairn, the purr bairn."

"It was what?" the girl said hoarsely, rising from the chair and gripping the old woman by the arm. "Speak you old hag, speak."

"It was from his grave."—Black and White.

A Wax Spring.

"I believe that Utah will one day produce more mineral wealth than any state in the entire country," remarked a gentleman who had at one time made a tour of the country. "When I was in the then territory, I made a prospecting trip into the Utah reservation, located in the northeastern corner of the state. During the trip my self and partner came upon one of the most remarkable curiosities in the west, a spring of mineral wax. Enough had bubbled out upon the surface of the ground to have satisfied the demand for ten years. It was then worth $4 a pound, and was used for the insulation of electric wires, yet there was enough in sight at half the price to have made us two rich for life, if we could have carried it to market. Two things stood in the way—the mandate of the government and the difficulty of transporting the stuff overland some several hundred miles into Provo. One of these days the reservation will be turned into the public domain and the wealth it contains will flow into somebody's pockets. As it is now, not a soul is permitted to trouble a single one of its resources. Well, we passed on and left the spring with a sigh that might have been heard at 'Frisco.'—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Many such Furnaces.
"Furnace" is a geographical name not unusual in the Atlantic coast region just below Mason and Dixon's line. In many instances the actual furnace is a mere tradition, but sixty or seventy years ago many such furnaces were built to smelt the bog-iron ore usual in all that region. It was once profitable to smelt this ore, but the marvelous abundance and cheapness of iron deposits elsewhere have made it impossible to carry on the old furnaces.

While the reign of Victoria has been longer than that of any of her predecessors on the English throne, there have been monarchs who have surpassed even her phenomenal record. Thus two successive monarchs reigned for the extraordinary period of 131 years.
