A Meeting of Races.

A short time ago an anthropologist of New York City got a group of men of many races in his house for a purpose. In the group there were a North American Indian, a Chinaman, a negro, a Hawaiian, a Hebrew, an Arab, an East Indian and Europeans of the Gothic, Celtic, Slavic and Latin races. All of them were found in the city of New York, and all were able to use the English language well or otherwise. The anthropologist who brought them together desired to get their notions upon certain questions of race, linguistics and religion, but he had great difficulty in getting them. He proposes to hold other conferences of the same kind, and to prosecute his investigations until his object has been attained. "All races of men are of one blood," according to the Scrip-

He belonged to a club-the poor man-to the 'Bachelors' club,' and least stay outside. As we neared the had seriously sworn to remain faithful to his principles. But you, too, you will come to it."

"But, then, in my father's day, young girls were brought up more simply; they aspired no higher than to play the plano prettily, write correctly, and make a graceful courtesy. Then, on leaving school young girls came into their families with enough instruction to understand the verses of a romance and follow a conversation, not enough to humiliate their parents and often their husbands. They were then really 'home angels.'"

"You exhaust my patience and I can't bear such prejudices. 'Home angels,' indeed. As if one must be a fool or a nonentity to be domestic. A bright woman never could be satisfied with the role you assign for her. If you had not wasted your time at the college you would not be so afraid of comparisons!"

"You are too severe-"Do you pretend that Latin and Greek are incompatible with modesty, sweetness and domestic qualities in a woman?'

"I declare it with enthusiasm."

"Very well, then; we will speak no more of marriage. You will accompany me at the Desjardins, for you will meet the twin sisters and you may judge for yourself, since my experience is not worth your own."

Poor, little mother! I knew she and her old friend, Mme, Desjardins, had together plotted against my bachelorhood and a girl with the degree of bachelor was enough to frighten me into it more securely than ever. When we arrived at Mme. Desjardins she greeted me as "little James." This exclamation rather upset me.

I expected her to ask me if I had brought my marbles along, but instead of that presented me to her daughters. The twin sisters resembled each other only in their dress. Mdle. Martha was a very beautiful brunette-a Greek goddess with pure, straight features. Mdlle. Rose was less imposing, a sweet, pretty blonde. I was sure that in spite of her 19 years she still played with dolls. She certainly was not the "learned young woman" my mother had proposed I should court. It must be the other one. There was dancing, and I offered my arm to Mdlle. Rose. After

She was witty !!ike this: a waltz we chatted. and a little sharp, this meek looking little blonde. I started a conversation on commonplace subjects and in a short space of time I had judged my companion to be a most charming little woman, and it was with much rejuctance I left her side.

Blue eyes, blue gauze, smiling lips and a cloud of golden hair were all mingled in my sleep that night. Why not the stately, statuesque, dark beau- to the august jail, chatting meanwhile ty my mother would so giadly welcome as a daughter?

In another week I must again accompany my mother to the weekly reception at Mme. Desjardins and then they would come to my mother's Fridays. Thus twice a week.

I saw her and naturally fell in love deeper and deeper. Dear little Rose, thought I, true "home angel." What a wife she will be to make home bright and happy-for some one. A strange fear came over me and I recalled many instances where Rose had appeared anxious to avoid me, perhaps out of consideration for her sister, or perhaps to save me from a great disappoint-

Under the torture of this audden auspicion I flew to my mother. "I must nake a clean breast of it, mother dear! I love Rose, and you must help me to

"Oh, James, is not this somewhat sudden? And those convictions you have cherished---"

"Nonsense, mother; listen, this is se-You will admit that so sweet and unpretending a girl is seldom found No more words, please, but do like the good mother you are, go and ask Mme. Desjardins for the hand of her daughter.

with the arrangements of a marriage for you."

She said all this with such an amused smile that I could not think her serious. I determined, however, is useless; let us to put an end to this suspense and soon more found an opportunity.

There was a concert and ball at the Desjardins' beautiful country home. When bending over her mother's hand I saw but one thing and heaven entered my soul as I caught the light of her eyes. It seemed but an instant before we were outside, wandering about the grounds. The words were on my lips to speak, when some one called to us, "Come, La Mariani is going to sing!" What care I for the Mariani? But Rose hastened her steps and I followed, hoping she would at house she led the way to a corner of the veranda and there the words and voice of the wonderful singer reached our cars and entered our hearts.

"My soul is full of dream, My soul is full of love."

"Those words are mine, Rose, do you understand? Don't you see how I love you? You are the woman I have dreamed of since I have known how to dream. You are the companion I have longed for! Rose, could you not love

In a low, sad voice she murmured: "My friend, I am not the companion you have dreamed of. Too often have you described her to me, your ideal woman. You love me because you think me simple as young girls should be-and you think because you have some time seen me attending household duties that I would make a good domestic wife, but you will love me no more when you are undeceived. When you know---" Her voice had been firm until now and though her words puzzled and pained me I became aware of the sorrow in her voice, a sorrow which meant more than sympathy. "Rose, in the name of heaven, what is it?" She mastered herself in a moment. "How often have you cruelly told me you would never marry a college graduate, a bluestocking, as you called her, and yet you ought to have known -your mother knows---' The fool I had been; and how I wished I could fall right there on my knees to ask her pardon. And yet how could I have suspected that so much feminine grace could be united to a ripe and mature intellect. "Oh, Rose! speak to me. Speak in Latin, in Greek, if you will. Only say you forgive me and will love me!"

Has she forgiven me? I am the happiest of men and have been for three years. If ever you come to see us, you will be asked to partake of the repasts my college wife superintends, and I think all of you gentlemen who stand in awe of learned women will seek one for your own.

JAPAN PAPERS AND "DEVILS."

The Japanese newspaper, as described in a letter from Tokyo to the New York Evening Post, is a curious product of the borrowed civilization of the mikado's empire.

Practically there is in it no teleaphic news, and the editorial articles are ingenious studies in the art of saying certain things without saying them in a way to warrant the censor's suppression of them: for the minister of state for the interior has nower to suspend any paper when, in his opinion, it says anything prejudicial to order, authority or morality.

Not infrequently the censor has occasion to write an order for the suppression of a newspaper, and when he does it he is brief but wonderfully polite.

He puts the honorifies "o" or "go" before all the nouns and verbs. Prefixed to a noun "o" means honorable. and to a verb it means honorably; similarly "go" means august, augustly So the order to the editor of the offending newspaper when it arrives will read

"Deign honorably to cease honorably publishing august paper. Honorable editor, honorable publisher, honorable chief printer, deign honorably to enter august jail."

The honorable editor with his honorable co-workers bows low before the messenger and then accompanies him of the weather, of the flower shows, or of the effect of the floods on the rice crop. Centuries of breeding under Japanese etiquette have made it impossible for any one to show annoyance.

Japanese Metals.

Japanese are famous not only for their skill in making decorative articles, but also for the beauty of the materials used. It is said that the secret of the composition of some of their alloys of brass and copper has only lately been revealed. The finest Jaganese brass, called "stachu," consists of ten parts of copper and five of zinc. Another very beautiful alloy, named "shadko," to which splendid hues are imparted by treatment with acids, is formed by mixing gold and copper, the proportion of gold varying from one to ten per cent of the entire mass.
