FATE OF AMERICANS.

TWO OF THEM MEET DEATH IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Their Bodies Mutilated by the Natives-Chopped to Pieces With Knives and the Savages Quarrel Among Themselves for the Remnants.

Met a Horrible Death.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.-The startling and horrible story of the killing of two Washingtonians and the mutilation of their bodies by the natives of the Congo Free State, has just been received here in a letter to Mr. Leo Harmon, of 1723 Ninth street N. W. The men were members of a party which, during November and December, 1894, and January, 1895, went from this city to enlist in the Belgian army for service in the Congo Free State, Those enlisted included Edward Thornton, a commissioned officer in the National Fencibles, employed in the war department; Lindsay G. Burke, Frank Batchellor, Harry Andrews, Barry Sparlin and Mr. Mellin, who was at one time a noncom-missioned officer in the United States army. All except Thornton and Mellin were members of the National guard of the district. The information received by Mr Harmon is that Burke and a party of fifty natives who were sent out to dislodge a band of dwarfs who had revolted, were ambushed and killed. An Arab who was with the command, but was some distance off at the time of the ambuscade, states that knows Burke was dead before the natives reached him and that the most hideous looking man he ever walked up and cut Burke's head off with one blow of a knife. The chief then began to slice pieces off his legs and arms and distribute them among his followers.

There were so many of the fiends that the pieces were very small, and before they had concluded there was a free fight to see who could get the little remaining. In some manner the dwarfs became alarmed and left the place, one fellow carrying off Burke's arm. The Arab saw the cause of their alarm, as Windeey, a New Yorker, who had command of another detachment of soldiers, sent out on the same errand, arrived right after the natives left. Windeey gathered up the remains of Burke and buried them. When Windecy learned the strength of the reb-els he hurried back to Michau and notified the commandant of the post.

The other Washingtonian who lost his life was killed on March 1, when the troops under the command of Baron Dhanis, revolted near Kabanbarre and assassinated a number of officers of their regiment, among them being Mellin. The body of Mellin was butchered almost beyond recognition, his heart having been cut out and burned so that his courage could not be used against the rebels by the whites. It is their belief that unless the heart is burned and the ashes scattered to the four winds the spirit of the man descends to his brethren.

Thornton is said to be in a very precarlous situation at Baska, but a re-lief expedition has been sent to his rescue. Gage, another American is very sick with the fever at Nyangine. The killing of Burke occurred in December, 1896, Algier Donies the Report. WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 29.-Secretary Alger said that he had not received any letter from General Miles of the purport stated in the recent dispatch. Port Townsend is one of the frontier sites at which government is contemplating making some improvements in the way of fortifications, and the secretary suggests that the presence there of engineers in making surveys may have given the impression that the government was about to locate troops at that place.

TALK OF ALASKA.

Gov. Brady Suggests a Commission to Visit the Country. SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 29.-In an interview Governor John G. Brady of Alaska said:

"The business men and officials of Alaska are concerned in effecting some change of amplification of the laws as they are at present in force. They will combine to submit to con gress a proposition to authorize the appointment of a committee which will consider the needs of Alaska on the ground. My idea is that the commission should consist of a senator, representative, and three bona fide residents of Alaska. If we are able to get a commission something may be accomplished for the good of Alaska. Otherwise time devoted to Alaska will be frittered away in the consideration of individual bills of no benefit to the country as a whole

"Many think Alaska should have territorial form of government. The objections to this are manifold, chief among them are the sparse population of the country. A territory means taxation, and the people are not there to be taxed. It would be of little avail to submit to congress resolutions for a change in the code now in existence. These things must investigated by a commission which can ascertain the needs of the people by personal examination. want an extension of the land laws, the regulation of the fish industry, the naturalization of the natives, the right of appeal and laws for the preservation of game.

The smuggling evils must be deal; with by the commisson. Last year 21,000 gallons of Canadian whisky were smuggled into Alaska." Governor Brady thinks that Alaska will be as great an agricultural and farming country some day as a mining one. His trip to this city is on private business. He wil not go to Washington to attend the coming s sion of congress as has been reported.
