KLONDIKE
What does it cost to get there? When and how should one go? What should one take? Where are the mines? How much have they produced? Is work plentiful? What wages are paid? Is living expensive? What are one's chances of making a strike? Complete and satisfactory replies to the above questions will be found in the Burlington Routes Klondike Folder. Now ready for distribution. Sixteen pages of practical information and an up-to-date map of Alaska and the Klondike. Free at Burlington Route ticket offices, or sent on receipt of four cents in stamp by J. Francis, Gen'l Passenger Agent, Burlington Route, Omaha, Neb.

MONTHLY SUFFERING.

Thousands of women are troubled at monthly intervals with pains in the head, back, breasts, shoulders, sides hips and limbs. But they need not suffer. These pains are symptoms of dangerous derangements that can be corrected. The menstrual function should operate painlessly.

Wine of Cardui makes menstruation painless, and regular. It puts the delicate menstrual organs in condition to do their work properly. And that stops all this pain. Why will any woman suffer month after month when Wine of Cardui will relieve her? It costs $1.00 at the drug store. Why don't you get a bottle to-day?

For advice, in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Wm. ROZENA LEWIS, of Denzel, Texas, writes: "I was troubled at monthly intervals with terrible pains in my head and back, but have been entirely relieved by Wine of Cardui."

THE MILD POWER CURES.

HUMPHREYS' VETERINARY SPECIFICS.

That the diseases of domestic animals, HORSES, CATTLE, SHEEP, DOGS, HOGS, and POULTRY, are cured by Humphrey's Veterinary Specifics, is as true as that people ride on railroads, send messages by telegraph, or sew with sewing machines. It is as irrational to bottle, ball and take passage in a sleep from New York to Albany, as to use the best remedies recommended by the U. S. Army Cavalry Officers.

BIT OF HUMAN NATURE.

A Hasty Conclusion About a Woman That Was Changed Later.

Two little girls occupied seats together on an elevated train the other night. Both were scantily dressed, hollow eyed and hungry looking. They were unmistakably of that class known as "cashgirls" employed in the downtown department stores, for each addressed the other by a number in lieu of a name.

Directly opposite them sat a fashionably dressed woman who was accompanied by a well groomed male escort. Upon their entrance the conversation of the little girls stopped abruptly and there was something pitiful in the earnestness with which both watched every move of the woman so stunningly gowned. Two pairs of abnormally keen though tired eyes thoroughly investigated every bit of finery in her apparel, from the highest plume of her hat to the soft, natty shoes which incased her shapely feet.

"Say, 76," whispered the smaller of the two girls, leaning toward her companion, "she's a real lady, she is. You can tell by her make up. Ain't that a beaut of a hat, though? And look at that diamond breastpin! Whew! I'll bet that hat cost all of"—

"Sh!" interrupted 76 in an undertone. "She'll hear you." There was a spell of silence as both girls leaned back with their heads resting against the top of the seat. They were enjoying the dazzling picture before them.

After glancing over a section of a newspaper which the man had given her the woman folded it up and handed it back to him.

"Did you get the tickets?" she asked.

"Yes," was the answer in an indifferent tone.

"Let me see them."

He extracted a small envelope from his vest pocket and handed it to her. "By the way," he remarked, "we will have to go tonight. I couldn't get good seats for tomorrow, and rather than miss it I took these."

"Tonight?" she repeated in a tone of vexation. "You know well enough that we can't go tonight. We have another engagement."

"Which we can conveniently cancel," he interpolated.

"Indeed we will not," she retorted, with a determined stamp of her foot.

A protracted argument followed which was not too low for the cashgirls to learn the drift.

"You can go to Mrs. Brown's alone," finally exclaimed the man, "and I will take your mother to the theater! We can call for you on our way home if you insist on going."

"You'll not go to the theater with anybody. You must and will go to Mrs. Brown's with me." Thus asserting herself, she deliberately tore the envelope containing the tickets in minute parts and threw them on the floor.

They left the train at the next station, he with a disgusted look on his face and she with head erect and a defiant glare in her bright eyes.

Scarcely had the rustle of her garments ceased to be heard when 76 sagely observed: "You're all off, 27. She ain't a real lady. It's only her fine duds what makes you think so. She's only an imitation, and no clerk would take her to a window if she wanted to make a sale."—Boston Herald.

The Terrapin Knew Him.
When the late Major Moses P. Handy lived in Washington, he was frequently attending dinners at Chamberlin's. At every dinner at all out of the ordinary it was Chamberlin's habit to pass around the table alive the terrapin that (it was assumed) the guests were to eat later.

One night, as Major Handy told the story, when the live terrapin were brought in, as usual, he noticed, as he thought, one of the terrapins wagging his head at him. At the next banquet at the same thing happened again, and at the next one of the terrapin detached himself from the rest and, crawling across the table to the major's plate, rose on his hind legs, and, resting his fore legs against a convenient tumbler, he bowed three times, solemnly; but courteously, to the astonished and awestruck guest.

Upon investigation it was discovered that the terrapin had seen the major so frequently at Chamberlin's feasting board that he recognized him as an old friend and politely addressed him as such. Mr. Chamberlin is said to have resented this story as a reflection on the freshness of his terrapin.—Kansas City Journal.

Two Capital Stories.
I pass into Arlington street, where Sheridan, sickened with his losses at play, kicked a man over who protested that he was only trying his shoe. "D—n you!" said Sheridan. "You are always trying your shoe!" Horace Walpole calls it the Ministerial street, where Pulteney and Lady Mary Montagu lived and on both sides of which Sir Robert Walpole had a house, where in my youth the Duke of Hamilton, with a beauty like a god's, was often to be seen.

Turning into Piccadilly there is the chariot of Lady Peel, who never missed her daily drive with her daughter in the park, and the yellow chariot of the Duchess of Cleveland, with her two tall footmen in breeches and silk stockings and their long canes. She was a lady with a philosophic turn of mind, for when her husband died she asked a relative down to the funeral and told him to bring his gun, adding, "We are old, we must die, but the pheasants must be shot."—Sir Algernon Nest in Nineteenth Century.

A Compensating Condition.
"I deceived you about one thing," murmured the new wife to her husband. "I am older than I told you."
"Don't mention it, my angel. I find that your fortune is fully twice as large as I had supposed."—Detroit Free Press.
