THAT INSURANCE CONTROVERSY

The Test Case Before the Supreme Court Likely to Be Hotly Contested.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 17 .- The legal controversy as to the liability to the state of the insurance companies that paid fees to Eugene Moore as auditor is becoming more complicated and the test case now pending before the supreme court promises to be hotly contested on both sides before a decision is allowed to stand. In the brief and argument of the defendant in the case of the State of Nebraska against the Home Insurance company, filed in the supreme court, three points are raised by which it is hoped to relieve the insurance companies of

The argument opens with the assertion that the brief of the state contained no positive argument in support of its claim and that the attorney general proceded upon the assumption that because Moore was not convicted under section 124 of the criminal code, as auditor of public accounts, of embezzlement of the insurance fees in question, and because the sureties upon his official bond are not liable to the state for his defalcation with regard to money which he, as auditor, had no right to receive.

The first of the three points raised by the Home Insurance company is that under the constitution of Nebraska the auditor had no right to perform services for the defendant and oher insurance companies unless the fees therefor were paid in advance into the state treasury. The second point is that the state is estopped to claim from the defendant insurance company compensation for services of the auditor which he could not legally perform unless the fees therefore were paid in advance into the state treas-
