Pale and Weak Women

Beauty and strength In women vanish early in life because of monthly pain or some menstrual irregularity. Many suffer silently and see their best gifts fade away.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

helps women preserve roundness of form and freshness of face because it makes their entire female organism healthy. It carries women safely through the various natural crises and is the safeguard of woman's health.

The truth about this great medicine is told in the letters from women being published in this paper constantly.

The World Rebuilt Every 35 Years.

Abram S. Hewitt, of New York, says that the world is built three times in slept well, but its wakefulness seemed a century. He says: "It is, of course, transferred to its mother. She lay with not to be expected that the 'sky scrapers' of today will be supplanted by others within the third of a century, but the general advance in the world and the progress of civilization are of such a magnitude that, broadly speaking, it is true, as I stated, that we rebuild the world about every thirty or thirty-five years.'

The Prime Requsites.

"It must constantly be borne in mind," asserts President Hadley, of Yale, "that the training of the free citizen is not so much a development of certain lines of knowledge as a development of certain essential qualities of character and habits of action. Courage, discipline and loftiness of purpose are the things really necessary for maintaining a free government. If a citizen possesses these qualities of character, he will acquire the knowledge which is essential to the conduct of the country's institutions and to the reform of the abuses which may arise.'

sash; but we don't use the room, you "No, we don't," sighed Marjory. It was one of her grievances, carefully kept to herself, that they could not afford to furnish their drawing room. She and her husband had left the boarding house in the city, where they had lived for three years, and moved out to the suburbs, chiefly on account of the baby. They were lot, was a great improvement on the one room at the boarding house, where Marjory had quaked if her child so much as whimpered. She and George took much satisfaction in gardening, and studied horticulture with zeal.

No earthly paradise is perfect; George and Marjory had determined not to run in debt, and the drawing consent to the proposal. room of their house was bare, excepting for a few chairs and the window whole front of the room, and was merely two huge panes of plate glass. George led the way into the cottages, commodious villas he called drawing room. them in his advertisement, and these front windows were the pride of his heart. Marjory detested them. She declared they made the houses look like shops, in spite of the verandas, and she was in continual fear lest the costly glass might be broken. Since the discovery that the lower sash was not properly hung, this fear was increased. The sash went up all right, but, after a little while, came down with a sudden rush. George had been promising to write to the landlord about it, but had forgotten from day to day. She had felt sure that he would remember when he paid the rent, and $160. THE ITALIAN WOMAN.

The rather low standard of her culture tends to keep the Italian woman behindhand in the march of emancipation, though one comes across remarkable exceptions among those occupied with education of literature, and and even in society, says The Contemporary. The Italian has a very acute intelligence, which takes in with extraordinary promptitude anything presented to her mind, but she do cultivate it; once her studies ended she closes her books; "adieu paniers. vendanges sont faites!" That most useful help to feminine intellectual development, reading, has not yet become a habit with her. There are countries where books are more used by women than by men; rich, they buy them; poor, they have the lending library; in their yearly expenditure, no matter how small it be, literature has its place. There is nothing like this in Italy. With the exception of a small minority, the women do not read, and have no wish to read. Their celebrated ancestresses of the sixteenth century must look at them with reproachful eyes. If the shade of the President des Brosses recrossed the Alps he would find no Maria Gaetana Agnesi, called the oracle of seven languages and the servant of the poor, and declared by him to be more marvelous than Milan Cathedral. Benedict XIV. granted permission to this learned Milanese lady to take her father's place as professor of mathematics at the University of Bologna during an illness of the father. The tradition of feminine learning is lost in Italy; indeed, it was lost long before the time of Maria Gaetana Agnesi. The Italian of to-day may yet prove herself capable of emulating her great forerunners, but in the meantime it is certain that modern ideas have made so much less way with her than with the women of other European countries that she offers a more formidable resistance than even the men of It was quite a little while before she her own land to any effort at reform could rouse him sufficiently to make in favor of her sex.
