The boys up the valley, the farmer boys, God bless them, have taken the bull by the horns and turned water on their finished crops, through the ditch that the people built but don't own. They made a compromise with the mill men at Arcadia, so we are informed, and pay them $5.00 per day for every day they use the water. This we are told was made necessary, as far as the mill company is concerned, as the ditch as it now stands, with a part of the head gate being closed by sand, will not furnish water at all times to supply both mill and ditch, therefore by times necessitating running the mill from their engine when the ditch is in operation. This the boys compensate the mill company for by paying them the $5.00 per day for the privilege of using the water. This arrangement will most likely, give the farmers from the Truelsen farm up, a very fair crop of corn and other crops that are not too far gone from the dry weather.

It does not seem just the right thing that a community should suffer the horrors of a drouth with an irrigating ditch laying along side their farms which is capable of watering every foot of land under it, and that after the people have bonded themselves to pay for it, and all for the contrariness of one man. There is no doubt that a remedy exists and if it is not seen to at once, we will be in the very same predicament next year, should a drouth set in. That ditch will cost this and Logan township many thousands of dollars and the people who must pay it surely have a right to its use. This they are willing to pay for at reasonable rates, and it is an outrage that this privilege should be withheld from them. This injustice is an injury to all in the county, for the grain that could be produced under it would feed the county. A meeting of our people should be called and a good trusty attorney hired to look the matter up and see what can be done. It might be possible to get relief by forming an irrigation district and thereby getting a head from which to work. The laws do not contemplate that any one man shall set at naught that which has been designed for the benefit of a community, and this particular institution has so many pregnable points that it can be forced into operation without a doubt.

The great strike is on and labor and the trusts stand face to face. Capital may feel the best and look the sleekest for a season but if labor don't come out on top, the common people will be the sufferers, and the common people means the welfare of the common country. Capital should have all that belongs to it but when it desires the scalp of the middle classes it is exacting a superfluous amount of flesh.

The McClay history of our navy which has just been published, and which has been selected for the use of naval cadets at Annapolis has been rejected as to the third volume on account of the slanderous statements it contains against Admiral Schley in regard to the battle of Santiago. Mr. Schley seems to be a marked man with the naval officers. They seem never to tire of trying to besmirch his character and to boost Sampson. This kind of tactics on their part has almost caused the common people to detest the name of Sampson. When that battle was on Admiral Schley did the engineering and the outcome was a grand victory for our arms, and all the petty jealousies of Sampson and his friends cannot detract from his glory. Sampson is the fellow that wears a corset and says that an officer who was not educated at Annapolis should be compelled to wear a uniform that would distinguish him from one that was, so that the world could see which was the real simon pure aristocrat. This country has never had any success yet with paper collars and crazy dutes and an attempt to foist them on the people as heroes unless they win their laurels, which they never have done yet, will be a flat failure. Secretary Long has did a very sensible thing in excluding that history from our naval academy.

Governor Savage is playing a trump card that if he wins, which seems very likely to be the case, will make him a reputation that will insure him an election in 1902, beside endearing him to the masses. From all indications he has started out to lay bare the chicanery of the men in high places, if such there be, who wrecked Ex-Treasurer Bartley and robbed the state of half a million dollars. His sixty days parole of Bartley, has more behind it than appears on its face and if our said bills governor clears up this piece of high handed villainy and sees that each party concerned gets their just dues, Custer county can lay claim to having furnished the state with the true reform governor, and he won't be a pop either.

Bryanism has got its death blow among its former adherents as well as with the gold standard element of the democratic party. Everything points to the fact that democracy is determined to combine with Bryanism left out, and try and regain what it has lost in the past decade by its policy of repudiation and folly. It has lost the confidence of the people and must expect to regain it only by repudiating its past policy and formulating one that will recommend it to the masses.

The Pall Mall Gazette of London makes public a plot they claim to have discovered that has for its aim the restoration of the French Empire. It may not be more than the enterprise of a newspaper reporter, but it surely is about time for France to have another eruption.

BEARDS AND THE ROMANS.

Only Elderly Men Shaved Clean in Cicero's Time.

In Cicero's time and after (presumably also before) many men wore beards and only men over 40 were clean shaven. Spartianus speaks of Hadrian as wearing full beard (promissa barba) to cover scars upon his face. Dio Cassius also speaks of him as the "first" to wear a beard. He is not the first emperor whose bust shows him to have allowed the hair upon his face to grow, but he is the first one represented as wearing a full beard. Evidently, therefore, Hadrian did not introduce beards, but only the custom of wearing them long and full. On Trojan's column there is a representation of the emperor sacrificing at the altar; many of the men who appear in the scene are bearded, but by no means all of them. Again, we find a scene wherein the seated emperor is surrounded by attendants, some of whom are bearded. In still another group Trojan is standing with a roll in his hand, addressing his men, and again we see both bearded and beardless men among those who stand before him. On the rectangular reliefs of the arch of Constantine we find that the men accompanying Trojan are bearded, even when he and they are clad in the toga. The arch at Beneventum shows in the same group Victor and comites both as bearded and beardless.—American Journal of Archaeology.
