Monument to Spanish Martyr.

Geneva has granted permission to a number of Spanish literary and political men to erect a monument in that city to Michael Servetus, the Spanish theologian, who was burnt as a unitarian heretic by order of the magistrates of Geneva at the instigation of John Calvin. The monument is to be unveiled next October on the 350th anniversary of the burning.

The New Dance.

See that the new dances are to be slow and stately, one of them embracing a stunt like this: "The court pose, when properly done, brings a body almost in a sitting posture, with the right knee doubled under as a support and the left leg perfectly straight and thrust far forward." Large, partly citizens with scant wind doing this slowly and with staidness will be a sight worth seeing.
