Romance in Real Life

A Ravenna correspondent in Monday's State Journal has the following interesting item of romance in real life the parties being residents of Bristol township, this county, and whose marriage occurred in Loup City week March 1st:

"Romance, that perhaps appeared tragedy, marked the nuptials of Miss Effie Karl and Anton Ures, which were celebrated here this week. About two weeks ago, young Ures, who has barely reached his majority, called at the home of Jacob Eberle, hte step-father of the young lady and escorted Miss Karl to a dance in the neighborhood. It was in the early hours of the morning when he returned with her and the step-sather took exceptions to the lateness. He attempted to show his disapproval by a physical display of violence with Miss Karl as the object of his wrath. She left home immediately and went to the home of a neighbor. When young Ures heard of the treatment the lady had received he hurried to an interview with the obstreperous parent and left the marks of his disapproval all over the countenance of Mr. Eberle. The next week the young people were married."

A Good Wind Story

Edgar Howard, editor of the Columbus Telegram is touring the south and in the last issue of his paper his readers were favored with a very interesting letter of his trip through Oklahoma. In the letter he takes occasion to tell his readers that the winds of Oklahoma are more severe than those experienced in Nebraska. It being a good one we give it to our readers:

"It has often been said that the wind blows in Nebraska. Don't you believe it. Nebraska people are not acquainted with wind. In fact they have never felt a wind, and will never be able to understand the meaning of the word until after they have visited this country. The natives tell some big wind stories. Some of them are too large to believe. Yesterday a native said to me: "We never have such bad wind storms as we used to have. First year I came down here I landed in a wind storm and didn't get out of it for four weeks. I tried to run a wheat drill. The wind was so strong that three horses could not pull the seeder against the wind. I had to drive all the time with the wind. I put four bushels of wheat in the drill when I started out. I pinned a pair of grain sacks on the sides of the middle horse to keep the others from rubbing his hair off, and what do you think? After running those four bushels of wheat through the seeder I noticed that the sacks on the horse looked heavy, and upon investigation I found that the wind had lifted two of the four bushels of wheat right out of the ground and had driven it into the mouths of those sacks on the horse. But that was several years ago, during the time when we had wind storms in the territory. The wind has not been blowing for several years, and maybe it will never blow any more."

It is recommended that no proxies be allowed in said convention, but that the delegates present therat be authorized to cast the full vote of the county represented by them.

It is also recommended and strongly urged that all counties shall complete their county organizations by selecting their county committees and the officers thereof prior to the date of the holding of said state convention.

Notice is hereby given that each of the odd numbered senatorial districts in the state is to select a member of the state committee to serve for the term of two years. By order of the state committee.

Pulpit, Pen and Gravestone

A preacher came at a newspaper man in this way: "You editors do not tell the truth. If you did you could not live; your newspaper would be a failure." The editor replied: "You are right, and the minister who will at all times tell the whole truth about his members alive or dead, will not occupy the pulpit more than one Sunday, and then will find it necessary to leave town in a hurry. The press and the pulpit go hand in hand with whitewash brushes and pleasant words magnifying little virtues into big ones. The pulpit, the pen and the gravestone are the great saint-making triumvirate." And the great minister went away looking very thoughtful, while the editor turned to his work and told of the surpassing beauty of the bride while in fact she was as homely as a mud fence.—Christian Endeavor News.
