In Honor of Memorial Day.
FORT COLLINS, Colo., May 20, 1905.—Comrades of Shiloh Post and old friends of Sherman county: As the smoke wreath from my meditative pipe, the vision of my mind retreats to the dear old bygone of our "auld Lang Syne" and like the old coffee cooler that I am less as though I had ran the guard and was absent from camp without leave, who desires to report.

As Memorial Day approaches, how natural it is for our thoughts to pursue a backward course, how they persist in delving into the dark vista of the past, we are called back to the darkest period of our nation's existence, back to that memorable 12th of April, 1861, the bombardment of Fort Sumter, to the first call for 75,000 volunteers, to the day we first donned the blue and when we camped, marched, fought and drank from the same canteen.

Comrades, the evolution of great and important events in the past 50 years, has made us a nation, great and powerful.

We look back to these events and see them placed as beautiful, indescribable monuments of power, prestige and glory, and we are proud of them; among these events there is one which is treasured in our heart and in the hearts of all loyal Americans, as the crowning event of all, for by and through it Columbia is indebted for all that is ours to enjoy today.

This event, the selection, election and inauguration of the President of a seemingly disunited nation, at a period in the history of our country when from the throats of nearly every man, woman and child came the discordant cries of secession, dissolution and dismemberment, at a time when the inauguration of the President, of any man north of the famous Mason and Dixon line, meant war, it meant a terrific struggle for the supremacy of flags and a dissolved union.

Comrades, you and I co-operated in the affairs of this event; you remember we were let in on the ground floor and honored with front seats under the glow of the footlights; you remember the incidents connected with the wild and stormy presidential campaign of 1860, notwithstanding the threats of war and dissolution, if a Union president was elected, yet the only means by which the north could be successful was by the disruption of the then Solid South, and through a pre-arranged understanding met in convention at Charleston, and after a stormy session became disrupted and adjourned to Baltimore, and Stephen A. Douglas of the northern wing of the democracy was chosen. The south shortly after nominated J. C. Breckenridge, and with two candidates in the field that grand old party that had presented a solid front for nearly sixty years was cut in twain and a Union president was elected, one that had patriotism and love of country first firmly in his heart, a president with the will and the nerve to declare and uphold the principle that this our Union must and shall be preserved.

Comrades and friends, this utterance fell from the lips of that grand old man, our then commander in chief of the republic, our first martyred president, Abraham Lincoln, a name revered by the entire Christian world, a name uttered, my arm, unbidden, raises to salute, the grandest of men, beloved of nations, a brilliant and loyal statesman, mighty in war, gracious in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen; whose scratch of the pen was a mandate which called nearly three million Union defenders to the front and field from the farm, the shop, the factory, the mines, the bank, the store and the school's to rally around Old Glory.

Comrades, forty-four years have passed. How vividly we recall the first five years of that period, when the stirring music of the fife and drum was heard in every city, town and hamlet, calling for volunteers.
While yet the smoke hung thick and black on the crumbling towers of Sumter, the wires flashed the news that war had been declared, and with it came the call for 75,000 boys. That's what they called you. You remember that 400,000 responded to that call and in less than six days every state in the north had supplied its quota, and a major portion of them armed and equipped had struck the trail for Dixie.

How proud we stood in our first suit of shoddy blue and how brave we all felt when we received our first gun. They were the old Harpers Ferry flintlocks, re-modeled and supplied with percussion tubes. Boys, you and I stood by him those guns and what nerve and bravery it took to hold our positions.

We will never forget the incidents and associations of our early camp life; the squad, company and battalion drills; guard mount, reviews and dress parade; reveille at sunrise and taps at lights out; the pitching of tents and striking of camp; the long weary marches, the hard fought battles, the dead, dying and wounded; and all the incidents of war from the fall of Sumter to the drop of the curtain at Appomattox by Grant, when he uttered those blessed words, "Let us have peace." How long we had waited for those words. Such a shout of joy was never heard before as came from the Blue and the Gray, the north and the south, the east and the west, all joined in one joyous shout.

Yes, boys, as Memorial Day with its beautiful service of flowers, draws near, we are called back; we are again tenting on the old camp-ground and hear the cheery voice of the orderly as he sings that oft repeated command, "Fall in, fall in." For roll call, drill or dress parade." We've mounted guard and the first relief are pacing their beats.
Comrades, of the millions of brave boys who responded to their country's call, nearly fifty years ago, but few are left today. One by one they leave us, mustered out, the small remnant of the old guard is on its last march.
We are slowly but surely melting on. But a few more years when 2 a last of the heroes of '61 will have entered fame's eternal camping-ground. The Memorial Day is not far distant when some little child, some one's darling, will place flowers on the grave of the last brave boy of the Grand Army of the Republic.
With best wishes to all and many bright and jolly campfires, I am as ever

Our public schools close this week Thursday for the present school year. Owing to the addition of the eleventh and twelfth grades to the schools, there will be no graduating class this year. We hear nothing but praise and commendation for the work just finished.

Ibsen's great drama, "Ghosts," was presented at the opera house last Saturday by one of the strongest companies that has ever appeared in Loup City and was one of most intense dramatic interest. "Ghosts" is one of the greatest plays on the American stage at present.

Here's another ancient item taken from Cooley's last week's Arcadia Champion. Isn't it a doodle? "The man who was shot last week by the marshal at Ashton, who claims to be a rancher living north of here, and who the Loup City paper characterized as a bum, came in on the train Monday evening. He purchased a suit of clothes and went on his journey northward seeming to be none the worse for wear." For heaven's sake, Cooley! Wake up!

We have received a copy of the Kalo na (La) News giving a lengthy account of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Carpenter at that place May 13, parents of Mrs. A. Boone, who went to attend the anniversary and is now visiting them. Mrs. Boone is one of seven children, five boys and two girls, all alive and in good health, and a grand reunion was held on that occasion. The News closes its article with these happy words: "Fate has been kind to the Carpenter family, for the hearse has never been at their door." Grandpa and Grandma Carpenter lived in Sherman county, near Rockville from 1883 to 1894.
