In fact, their association dissolved by junction. Another important point pearance well prior to that time. gained by the grain dealers, if the referee's report is adopted, is that the material part of the Gondring act will be declared repealed and the defendants will not be subject to criminal prosecution for their actions prior to the Junkin act, which went into effect in July, 1905. In declaring that the state elected to stand on the Junkin act and that the Gondring act was repealed by the latter, the court will re lieve the grain dealers of considerable anxiety. While the Junkin act is considered a stringent statute, the proof submitted by the attorney general related almost entirely to actions of the association prior to the adoption of the Junkin law.

Old Point Comfort, Va.-Wednesday was a notable day in the commonwealth of Virginia. President Roosevelt joined with surviving members of both the blue and the gray in paying appropriate and impressive tribute to the nation's dead.

In the morning the president delivered a patriotic oration in the beautiful grounds of the naval hospital at Portsmouth and directly afterward unveiled a handsome marble shaft erected by the army and navy union in the cemetery adjoining the hospital grounds to the memory of its fallen comrades. The ceremonies at Portsmouth were under the auspices of the army and navy union. Nearly 4,000 sailors and marines of the North Atlantic fleet participated in the parade. In addition, there were organizations representing the army and navy union, the Grand Army of the Republic, the United Confederate Veterans and many civic and patriotic societies.

In the afternoon the president and Mrs. Roosevelt, after an informal luncheon and reception of the officers ton, commander of the yard, visited livered an address to the hundreds of negro and Indian students of the institute, afterward making a tour of the various departments of the school.

MODELS FOR SHIP STUDY. AS TO RATE BILL

Replicas of Battleships and Other Craft Made by Navy Department Draughtsman.

One of the chief aids to naval construction and transportation recognized by all modern war schools and navy departments is the model and the half-model. By means of these skillfully constructed replicas of the real battleship, cruiser, army transport or yacht, officers are instructed in many details of naval architecture, such as the exact loaction of watertight bulkheads, the allotment of space for engines, boilers and auxiliary engines the double bottoms, the protective deck, the armor, the electric system. the location of the main and secondary batteries, the turrets, and other details of construction and operation.

A most important branch of the modern shipbuilding yard, whether of merchant or war ships, is the practice of "trying out" the model in special tanks made for the purpose, before proceeding with the construction of the posed of. full-size vessel. By this means the faults in design are discovered and remedied. It is understood to be the ambition of the quartermaster general of the United States army, C. F. Humphrey, to make its transport service not only equal to that of any other modern world power, but also to be able truthfully to assert any detail of its equipment faithfully represents the highest development in that particular line. The service that these models render -especially the longitudinal sectionis (1) a physic-historical record, (2) a physic-educational example and (3) a means of instant visual comparison. The model, in other words, presents a practical method of teaching and of recording naval construction and equipment processes, and of enabling the department to compare what it has already installed with what is offered it. It is now conceded that the faithfully designed model offers to the student of naval architecture a better practical illustration of the hull and equipment of the vessel shown than the lines of the same vessel on paper. Model making in the United States -that is of warships and army transports-is in its infancy. Those that were furnished the war and the navy departments prior to 1903 were made abroad. In that year several were made by Horace E. Boucher, a draughtsman in the navy deaprtmen: at Washington. He was sent to St. Louis to erect the navy department exhibit at the world's fair, which consisted of a model of a battleship complete in every detail.

Realizing that one of the best object essons for the guidance and instruction of the heads of the various departments and for the officers is the model and half model, the war department last year, through Gen. Humphrey, ordered one of each made of the United States transport Sherman at a cost of some $8,000, the model to be one-forty-eighth the size of the ship.

Some idea of the size of the Sherman may be gathered when it is known that her chief dimensions are 465 feet over all, 49 feet beam, 34 feet depth and 26 feet draught. She will carry 1,776 soldiers, and 6,000 tons of cargo without troops. Her bunker capacity is 2,000 tons and her tanks will hold 1,200 tons state, war and navy department building at Washington.

These are the first models of a naval architects and others who have inspected them declare that they excel in point of detail any models made abroad. This is especially true of the half model, or longitudinal section, for this miniature reproduction of the great ship, sliced in half, as it were, longitudinally, shows at a glance not chinery, the furniture, bunks, and, in fact, all the interior fittings required to properly house the troops. The storerooms and holds filled with barrels of saloon with its tables and chairs, the staterooms, the magazines,"the boilers and a perfect little engine made absolutely to scale, each working part being made to fit the other with mechanical exactness.

THE NAVAL BILL COMES FIRST

Then There Will Be Action on Con. ference Reports-That on Statehood Measure Likely to Create Animated Discussion.

WASHINGTON - The probabilities in the United States senate this week include consideration of a number of appropriation bills and conference reports. The statehood question, the railroad rate bill, the type of canal to be constructed across the isthmus of Panama and the right of Senator Smoot to retain his seat in the senate. The week's business will begin with the taking up of the conference report on the rate bill and it will hold the favored position until dis-

After action on the rate bill preference will be given to appropriation bills, the naval bill coming first among these and the District of Columbia bill following it. Of the appropriation conference reports that on the Indian bill will receive first consideration with others following when ready to be presented.

The sea level canal bill will hold its place as the unfinished business. but it will continue to be jostled out of position by other measures enjoying higher privileges under the rules of the senate. It is now generally conceded that there shall be a vote on this measure before the final adjournment of the session, and with this assurance Senator Kittredge who has charge of the bill, is content not to press unduly for its continued consideration. He will, however, be prepared to proceed with it whenever the way is clear and will demand a vote at the earliest practicable moment. There are many speeches still to be made on the bill. Among the senators who are expected to speak on it are Messrs. Morgan, Millard, Spooner and Hopkins.

The conference report on the statehood bill will be the subject of animated discussion, but the belief is quite general that the report on the rate bill will be accepted after comparatively little controversy. Senator Foraker has already given notice of opposition to the adoption of the statehood bill and he will have the support of several senators who stood with him against the union of Arizona and New Mexico. They will make strenuous efforts to have the bill returned to the conferees with instructions to stand for the senate position confining statehood legislation to the creation of the one state out of Oklahoma and Indian Territory.
