Two thousand persons killed is con-sidered to be a fair estimate of the casualities. Vina del Mar, three miles from Valparaiso, and having a population of over 10,000; Quirihue, 225 miles to the southward with a population of 2,500; Salto; Limache, 15 miles to the northwest with a population of 6,500; Quillota, 25 miles to the north, with a population of 10,000; and villages all around were destroyed. Most of the damage was due to fire which started immediately after the first shock. The whole population is sleepstreets. Food is very scarce. Milk costs two Chilean dollars a liter, and it is almost impossible to obtain meat, even at high prices.

The railhoads are all destroyed.

Rain, which began to fall immemediately after the first shock stopped an hour afterwards. The nights are ver cold and windy, the people sleping in the open are suffering greatly.

Proportionately the catastrophe here is considered greater than that which befell San Francisco. Valparalso and neighboring towns are wrecked and partially burned and in all of the towns of the Aconcagua valley conditions are similar. In the southern portion of Chile several shocks were felt at Talcapuano, Concepcion, Talco and Zone, but there the disaster was not appaling.
